House Acts To Prohibit Subsidies by 278-117 Vote

Senate Expected To Do Likewise; Presidential Veto Believed Likely

By Christine Sadler

After rejecting a dozen compromise proposals, a powerful House coalition of Republicans and farm State Democrats late yesterday voted 278 to 117 against use of general food subsidies to hold down the cost of living after December 31.

Tied with the subsidy ban sent to the Senate was legislation extending the life of the Commodity Credit Corp. and a specific provision that payments on cottonseed, soybean, and peanut oils and meals might be continued.

Although the Senate is expected to pass the measure in short order, House leaders expressed confidence the votes would not hold in the face of an anticipated Presidential veto.

First Victory

The vote yesterday gave to Congress the first victory in round two of the bitter subsidy battle raging between the Administration and Capitol Hill for almost a year. The Chief Executive won the first round in June when his veto of similar legislation was upheld.

Picking up strength throughout the day, "subsidy Congressmen" corralled 120 votes to 154 in their efforts to pass an amendment offered by Representative Monroney (Democrat) of Oklahoma to extend the subsidy through next September provided the Little Steel formula for wage adjustments was not broken in the meantime.

Monroney's proposal would have limited subsidy funds to 750 million dollars for the period and stopped them automatically if wages broke through the Little Steel pattern.

Quickly voted down—but showing the plight of several Republicans pledged to support the bill—was an amendment put forth by Representative Edwin Hall (Republican) of New York to permit purchase by the CCC and resale of corn and other feed needed for cattle and poultry in the Eastern shortage areas.

Hall's amendment would have authorized CCC to acquire and sell the needed feed at unspecified prices, thus sanctioning part of the subsidy formula acrimoniously assailed during three days of debate.

Feed Cows, Not Babies

Representative Wright (Democrat) of Pennsylvania declared, "It's very queer you want a subsidy to feed a cow, but are opposed to it to feed a baby," pointing up one of the chief points of argument in the measure. Numerous Congressmen opposed to "consumer subsidies," which they declared passed on grocery bills to future generations, made it clear they did not oppose "production subsidies" if needed to increase the Nation's food supply.

Other amendments voted down included:

1. A suggestion by Representative Kunkel (Republican) of Pennsylvania that subsidies be granted an additional year of grace by the continuance of those now in effect through 1944. The standing vote on this proposition was 90 to 144.

2. A demand by Representative Patman (Democrat) of Texas that the section prohibiting subsidies be eliminated altogether. This lost on a teller vote to 102 to 173.

3. A proposal by Representative Ford (Democrat) of California that

D. C. Cost of Living Up Six-Tenths of One Pct.

Cost of living in the Nation's big cities rose four-tenths of 1 per cent between September 15 and October 15, with the District of Columbia costs rising six-tenths of 1 per cent, the Labor Department reported yesterday.

Food costs alone rose 1.2 per cent in the Capital, which was listed among the six cities with the highest living costs.

Colossal Flop, Says Ickes

Patterson Defends 'Canol' Oil Project as Military Necessity

By Mary Spargo

In a heated session before the Truman Committee yesterday, Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War, vigorously defended the Army's 139 million-dollar oil project in northwest Canada as a military necessity.

Patterson's testimony was in answer to charges leveled before the Senate investigating committee by Interior Secretary Ickes, also Petroleum Administrator for War, that the Canol project was a colossal failure "that should be junked right now."

As of November 1, Patterson revealed, the War Department has spent $134,000,000 on the entire Canol project, which includes four items:

1. Development of oil fields near Fort Norman on the Mackenzie River, in the Canadian Northwest territories.

2. Construction of a pipeline for crude oil from Norman Field to Whitehorse in Canada's Yukon Territory.

3. Erection of a refinery at Whitehorse (from a refinery dismantled in Texas).

4. Construction of a pipeline from Whitehorse to Skagway, Alaska, thence to Fairbanks, the terminus of the Alaskan Highway, and to Watson Lake, Canada, down the highway toward the United States. The pipeline, he said, is to be operated in either direction.

Asserting he was not minimizing 134 million dollars, Patterson pointed out that it was less than one day's cost of the war, and was worth it if it shortened the war by one day.

He said he believed that oil would be produced by next spring and distributed through these pipelines.

Fear of a Japanese invasion of Alaska dictated the decision to institute the Canol project, Patterson said.

Defense of Alaska, he asserted, had been determined to be dependent upon air power, aside from naval action. Realization of the fact that planes would need fuel and that the resources of the United States in petroleum were dwindling fast dictated seeking Canadian supplies, the Undersecretary said.

He called the committee's attention to its own recent report suggesting the acquisition of oil rights in other countries, and to the re-

Lumber Taken 1500 Miles For $289,000 Building

The "Little Pentagon," constructed of California redwood hauled 1500 miles to Canada's northwest at a cost of $289,000 to U. S. taxpayers, was called to the attention of the Truman Committee by G. I. privates, who termed it "the redwood palace."

Headquarters for the contractors on the Army's Canol pipe line, it is located in Edmonton, Canada, 1000 miles from the pipe line. Because an Edmonton ordinance forbids wooden buildings after the war, the Army must tear down or stucco the "Little Pentagon," so named because, like Washington's maze, it was authorized by Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell.

Senator Ferguson (Republican) of Michigan said yesterday the War Department had made no effort to obtain lumber in Canada for the project, although the United States has a serious lumber shortage, while Canada has not.

Power in Pacific

Pearl Harbor, T. H., Nov. 23 (AP). Success of the first American offensive of the war in the central Pacific is assured, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced triumphantly today.

Already the Twenty-seventh Division has captured Makin Atoll. The capture of Tarawa, where the Marines have consolidated their positions, is certain. Amphibious forces cracked the beach defenses of both places last Saturday.

The situation on Abemama Atoll, 80 miles south of Tarawa, was reported well in hand. The Marines' landing there was announced only yesterday.

[Eugene Burns, Associated Press correspondent, declared that the forces attacking the atoll included the greatest aircraft force ever assembled in the Pacific—Editor's note.]

An excellent bomber field within striking distance of strong Japanese bases in the Marshall Islands to the north will become available with the capture of Tarawa. Fighting on Tarawa was believed to be confined to Betio Island, which has air base facilities. The enemy was strongly entrenched on Betio, at the southwestern tail of Tarawa Atoll. The island is a sand waste less than 2 miles long and about a 1000 yards wide.

Progress Reported

The Marines were making good progress on Betio, where it was indicated they had landed on the western end of the islet and had pushed the Nipponese back to the eastern portion.

Makin, to the north of Tarawa, is entirely in American hands, a fleet spokesman said. Forces there were engaged in mopping up and in cleaning out snipers.

The fleet spokesman indicated there were four or five thousand Japanese on Tarawa, where the stiffest resistance was encountered from the outset.

"Approximately twice as many as were on Attu (where there were more than 2000) and five times as many as on Makin," was the way he put it.

He did not say whether all these troops were concentrated on Betio or whether other islands of the atoll were garrisoned. It was obvious, however, that the bulk of the Japanese strength in the Tarawa atoll was on Betio.

The spokesman made no comment on a statement today by Sec-

Patton Hit Shell-Shocked Man, Eisenhower Forced an Apology

Seventh Army Head's Superior Called Conduct 'Despicable'

By Edward Kennedy

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Nov. 23 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., who led the American Seventh Army through a brilliant conquest of Sicily, at the close of that offensive apologized in person to his Army for having struck a shell-shocked soldier in a hospital tent in a fit of rage while the campaign was in a critical stage.

The incident led to an investigation to determine whether animosity of his men toward Patton was so great as to impair his usefulness as a commander. This investigation apparently convinced Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and the War Department that this was not the case, as Patton retained his command and was nominated by the President to be promoted in his permanent Army rank to major general.

Sunday night, in comment on a broadcast by Columnist Drew Pearson, an official headquarters statement was issued saying:

"General Patton is commanding the Seventh Army, has commanded it since it was activated and is continuing to command it. General Patton has never been reprimanded at any time by General Eisenhower or by anyone else in this theater."

Three-Month-Old Incident

Although today's statement bore out that Patton had not, indeed, been officially reprimanded, correspondents were permitted to tell what did happen.

The incident was disclosed officially by Allied headquarters today 3½ months after it occurred. Behind the headquarters announcement is one of the strangest war stories ever told.

It is a tale of a general, whose merit is recognized by everyone, slapping and swearing at a distraught soldier whom he believed to be a malingerer and denouncing the soldier as a coward before other soldiers who lay wounded in their cots.

As it turned out, the soldier in question was not a coward, but a 24-year-old Southern boy with an excellent record who had gone through the grimmest fighting of the Tunisian and Sicilian campaigns and who had left the front only when ordered out by his unit doctor. The soldier, on being called a coward by his commanding general, felt that his whole world had disintegrated.

General Eisenhower, upon hearing of the incident, immediately wrote Patton a letter in which he denounced his conduct and ordered

Sicilian Incident Likely to Hold Up Officer's Promotion

Disclosure that Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton struck a shell-shocked soldier in a Sicilian hospital threatened yesterday to hold up indefinitely Senate confirmation of Patton's promotion from colonel to the permanent rank of major general.

Ranking members of both House and Senate Military Committees said they would oppose any formal congressional investigation of the incident, on the grounds that the Army has full jurisdiction, but the general's conduct was severely criticized on both sides of the Capitol.

A member of the Senate Military Committee, who asked not to be named, said "there isn't a chance" now that the committee will approve or the Senate will confirm Patton's October 1 nomination for a permanent increase in Army rank.

May Come Up Today

Both House and Senate committees had scheduled meetings this morning on other business, but members said the Sicilian incident inevitably will come up.

The name of "Old Blood and Guts" heads the list of permanent Army promotion nominations sent to the Senate the first of last month. Action had been temporarily delayed because some of the Army officers on the list (not Patton) lacked the requisite 28 years' experience for permanent general's rank. Legislation had been hurried through the Senate to remove the service requirement, and was the first order of business before the House Military Affairs Committee today.

Representative Lyle J. Kilday (Democrat) of Texas said questions on Patton's Army seniority (he was commissioned a second lieutenant

Battered From Its Center to Suburbs, City Gets No Respite

London (Wednesday), Nov. 24 (AP).—A mighty force of RAF bombers was reported today to have pounded Berlin for the second successive night last night as the German capital lay smashed and smoking from a 1000-bomber raid which hurled more than 2300 long tons of high explosives and incendiaries on the Nazi capital Monday night.

Germany's radio Zeesen announced last night's attack after British watchers saw the bombers cross the coast in a procession which took 45 minutes to pass.

The Reich capital, a city of 332 square miles, was still smoking from the greatest aerial blow ever struck in warfare when the German announcer took the air to say the new attack was expected "and special defense precautions were taken."

The weather favored the defense more than the previous night, the radio said and it declared that a "considerable number of attacking planes were shot down."

There were indications that last night's assault, the third on Berlin in the last six days, might be as heavy as the history-making 77-ton-per-minute bombing of the previous night.

The Allies did last night what the Germans once dreamed of doing to London, but on five times the scale the Germans ever attained.

The record raid on the Nazi capital, which Germans leaders once boasted never would feel the terror of Allied bombs, was made despite bad weather, and the huge black night bombers of the RAF flying through thick clouds not only smashed the industrial suburbs but hit government buildings in the great city with their record weight of explosives. The previous record weight of just 2300 long tons poured down on Hamburg last August 23.

Reports tonight from Stockholm said a heavy pall of smoke hung over the stricken Nazi capital all day, and tonight parts of the city still were in flames with firefighters and other air raid workers, already weary from coping with a heavy attack four nights before, still toiling desperately.

United States Marauder medium bombers kept up the attack on the Nazi-controlled continent during the day, bombing Cherbourg in

Lewis Spurns Pact With Half Of Operators

Ickes Had Signed Producers' Offer Linked With OPA

By Ben W. Gilbert

Coal operators representing 50 per cent of the Nation's soft coal tonnage yesterday offered to sign a contract with the United Mine Workers but UMW President John L. Lewis spurned it momentarily, pointing out that he already had a contract covering the entire industry—with Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes.

The operators—Northern Appalachian, Indiana, Illinois and far Western producers—offered to sign the same pact that Ickes signed plus a retroactive payment of $10, effective in mid-December, subject to Office of Price Administration action on prices.

Wants All Included

Lewis indicated that the terms were acceptable—subject to possible minor modifications but added that he wanted the whole industry included before discussing details.

The Southern Appalachian group offered an alternative proposal which was unacceptable to Lewis and received coolly by other operators. In addition to the Southern group, the principal holdouts have been the captive mine operators who have refused to attend the meetings.

Ickes was reported prepared to exert pressure on the Southern group to yield in the interest of a speedy agreement.

Meanwhile, Ickes and the OPA

Congress Hears 'World RFC' Plan

He said in an accompanying memorandum that "to spend hundreds of billions of dollars to fight a war thrust upon us and then to balk at investing a few billions to help peace and prosperity would appear to be a singularly unwise policy."

Barkley Seeks Compromise On Rail Wages

Negotiations Are Reopened in Effort To 'Hold the Line'

By Robert C. Albright

Rail pay negotiations last night were reported to have been informally reopened in an effort to forestall a legislative crash through the Administration's wage stabilization line.

Senate Majority Leader Alban Barkley, it was learned, has stepped into the dispute in an attempt to obtain a settlement midway between rail brotherhood demands for a flat 8-cent-an-hour increase and Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson's proposed sliding scale.

Barkley is intervening with the knowledge of the rail brotherhoods, and if his move is successful the brotherhoods are believed willing to drop their fight for congressional passage of the Truman-Crosser bill, overriding Vinson to grant the full 8-cent increase.

Already Reported Out

The bill already has been reported by a Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommittee headed by Senator Edwin C. Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado and appeared equally certain of approval by the full Senate Interstate Commerce Committee. A meeting of the full committee has been delayed, at Barkley's request, pending outcome of the negotiations.

Barkley already has conferred separately with Vinson and representatives of rail labor, and was reportedly arranging another joint conference between stabilization officials and representatives of railway labor and management.

One possible basis of settlement was a compromise suggested to the President by the brotherhoods themselves on September 16, 1943, on which they claimed to have reached a White House understanding. At a subsequent White House conference, the compromise was rejected.

This called for sliding scale wage increases ranging from 10 cents an hour for workeers receiving 46 cents an hour or less, to a 7-cent increase for workers receiving 76 cents an hour or above.

Present Place Important, Too

Dr. Dun Elected Bishop But May Not Accept Post

By Robert Tate Allan

Election of the Very Rev. Angus Dun, dean of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass., yesterday does not necessarily make him new Bishop of Washington and successor to the late Bishop James E. Freeman.

There still remains the matter of his acceptance of the high office, and approval by standing committees and bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church. His election came at the special diocesan convention at the Episcopal Church at St. Stephen and the Incarnation, 16th and Newton sts. nw.

Interviewed by telephone immediately after his election, Dr. Dun told The Post that he was "highly honored" at the news, and would "give it the most careful consideration."

He further explained that his present position "is important to the life of the church" and that he wanted time to consider the duties the new post would involve before announcing his decision.

In his conversation with The Post, Dr. Dun said that the three other nominees presented by Justice Roberts' committee, as well as himself, are all graduates of the Episcopal Theological School of which he is dean.

They are Lieut. (Chaplain) Donald B. Aldrich, on leave as Navy Chaplain from New York City's Church of the Ascension, and runner-up to Dr. Dun in the election; the Very Rev. Sidney Edward Sweet, dean of Christ Church Cathedral, St. Louis, and Dr. Dudley Scott Stark, rector of St. Chrysostom's Church, Chicago.

British Repulse Heavy Nazi Counterattack

8th Army Seizes Strategic Town, Algiers Radio Says

By Noland Norgaard

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Nov. 23 (AP).—Charging before a backdrop of burning towns and villages being destroyed in a "scorched earth" withdrawal to their winter line, German troops struck sharply at Canadian units of the Eighth Army northwest of Agnone in the central Italian sector but were repulsed after a hard two-hour battle, the Allied command said today.

Throughout the mountainous inland sector the enemy was firing and dynamiting everything he could not carry with him to his powerful new gun-studded defense line. Smoke shrouded the horizon as the sizable cities of Castel di Sangro and Alfedena burned through the second day. Yesterday's counterattack east of those cities evidently was designed to give the Nazi demolition squads time to complete their task of destruction.

(The German high command reported Montgomery's reinforced troops had launched violent attacks against Nazi defenses north of the Sangro River at the extreme eastern end of the battle line—an action not confirmed by Allied sources. "Numerous violent attacks were repulsed and one local dent was sealed off," the Nazi communique reported.

(This gave the first indication from either side that the Eighth Army had succeeded in crossing the Sangro River in strength at any point.)

London (Wednesday), Nov. 24 (AP). The German counterattack in Russia, rising to new intensity, wrested several populated places from the Russians after hand-to-hand fighting and savage gun duels in which more than 100 German tanks were destroyed and 2000 Nazi soldiers were killed, Moscow announced today.

The Russians failed to locate the places they evacuated, but said the Germans were flinging large forces of tanks and infantry into their counterattacks in the Chernyakhov-Brusilov area of the northern Ukraine.

Here, where the Russians reach farthest west, and have retreated from Zhitomir, the Germans were smashing at the flank of the Soviet army's Kiev salient.

American Planes Batter Jap Base On New Britain

Southwest Pacific Allied Headquarters, Wednesday, Nov. 24 (AP).—More than 100 American bombers and fighters loosed 142 tons of bombs and fired 35,000 rounds of ammunition against the Japanese base at Gasmata, New Britain, setting great fires in one of a series of raids that struck 11 enemy positions in the Southwest Pacific.

Heavy Liberator and Medium Mitchell Bombers, escorted by P-38 fighters, aimed their blows principally against the Gasmata airdrome fuel and supply dumps November 22, in an attack which caught the enemy by surprise, for there was no interception.

General Douglas MacArthur's communique announcing the raids said one Mitchell was lost through antiaircraft fire.

Double or Nothing

Dealer Fined $500 for Making Wine and Whisky 'Tie-in' Sale

Criticizing methods of some liquor dealers here as partly responsible for the whisky shortage, Judge George D. Neilson in Municipal Court fined Aaron Aaronson, proprietor of the A. B. Liquor Store, 1805 Columbia rd. nw., $500 after a conviction of making a "tie-in" sale of wine with whisky in violation of an Office of Price Administration regulation.

At the trial by jury, H. C. Walburn, an OPA employe, testified that on October 23 Aaronson refused to sell him whisky until a bottle of wine also was purchased. Aaronson insisted, however, that he merely "suggested" the purchase of the wine.

The fine was recommended by John L. Laskey, chief District OPA attorney, after Aaronson withdrew a motion for a new trial.

Judge Neilson said arrangements such as the "tie-in"" are responsible for much of the liquor shortage and said the practice is "allowed to persist by members of the trade who are fully aware of the regulations. The practice is definitely harmful to the industry as a whole and I intend to deal harshly with those who promote it."

The judge continued, "The regulation may seem stringent and hard, but as long as we are in war, violating the regulation by illegal methods of trade defeats the very purpose for which such legislation is enacted."

14-Cent Hourly Increase Sought

Long Hours Endanger Safety, Bus Dispute Panel Advised

Union representatives contended that public safety is endangered by the long working hours of drivers on the Arnold-operated bus lines whose manpower shortage is aggravated by the inability of the company to compete for needed manpower with other transportation companies having higher wage rates, as a three-man fact-finding panel met yesterday to recommend action in the month-old labor dispute.

Union demands center around the request for a 14-cent hourly increase, equalizing wages on the Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co. with those on the Capital Transit Co.

E. L. Oliver, manager of the Labor Bureau of Middle West and union counsel at the panel hearings, admitted that the wage increase would not "entirely eliminate" the "staggering amount of overtime put in by the men" but would go a long way in making it possible for the Arnold lines to hire and keep men.

Producing a number of log cards of the company's drivers, and calling several men as witnesses, Oliver showed that drivers are working averages of 12 hours, sometimes ranging up to 18 hours a day.

This, he declared, was done in the face of Virginia State regulations limiting bus drivers' hours to eight a day. ICC regulations per-him to make amends or be removed from his command.

Patton Apologized for Striking Man in Sicily, Army Reveals

"The old man certainly took the hide off him," a headquarters spokesman said.

"Patton was necessary to us and valuable to us," said the spokesman. "He did great things and he is capable of doing more great things.

"Eisenhower handled the matter personally in his usual forceful way. When he got through there was no doubt of his attitude in the matter."

This officer stressed that Patton's action in assembling and addressing his troops was "on his own volition" and in excess of what Eisenhower had demanded.

Eisenhower, commenting on the incident, described Patton's conduct as "despicable," but at the same time the commander in chief expressed the greatest confidence in Patton as a general and said that, like many other officers in this theater, he was of the opinion that no other commander could have achieved such results as Patton did in Sicily.

The incident for which Eisenhower rebuked one of his ablest battle leaders occurred early in August, when the Sicilian campaign was at a critical period. Patton, visiting an evacuation hospital, was walking among the wounded, patting some on the head and sympathizing with them, when he came upon a soldier sitting on a cot with his head in his hands, weeping.

In reply to Patton's question as to what was the matter with him, the soldier was quoted as replying: "It's my nerves. I guess I can't stand shelling."

Burst Into a Rage

According to those present, the general thereupon burst into a rage, and, employing profanity, called the soldier a "coward" and "yellow belly" and other epithets and ordered him back to the front. The scene attracted several persons, including the commanding officer of the hospital, the doctor who had admitted the soldier, and a nurse.

In a fit of fury Patton struck the soldier on the rear of the head with the back of his hand. The soldier fell over slightly, and a nurse, intent on protecting the patient, made a dive toward Patton, but was pulled back by a doctor. The commander of the hospital then intervened.

Patton, still in high temper, told other patients his views, then returned to berate the shell-shocked soldier again. The soldier appeared dazed, but offered to return to the front and tried to gain his feet as Patton left the hospital without making further investigation of the case.

It was later ascertained that the soldier on the back of the head with ord both in Tunisia and Sicily. He had been diagnosed as a medical case a week before the hospital incident, but he refused to leave the front until he finally was ordered back by his unit doctor. After Patton left the hospital the soldier demanded to return to the front mediately, but was forced to rest for another week.

[Doctors at the hospital diagnosed the private's illness as acute malaria and said he was partially delirious at the time of the general's isit, one report revealed.—Editor's note.]

"Don't Tell My Wife"

Persons who talked to the soldier after Patton left said he was miserable and felt his life was ruined. They quoted him as pleading: "Don't tell my wife. Don't tell my wife." The chaplain at the hospital later calmed him by explaining that Patton's outburst was due to the strain of battle.

At the close of the Sicilian campaign Patton, after recounting the action, told correspondents: "When these things are happening a commanding general is under great nervous tension. He may do things he may afterward regret. I know a great many people regard me as a ———.

"But I have patted five soldiers on the back for every one I have spoken a harsh word to. I dealt harshly with a couple of soldiers and was wrong. I am going to apologize to them."

Patton is extremely profane in language and at the same time deeply religious. He has called on the help of God in all his orders of the day, and he is convinced the Allies are fighting on the side of right and justice.

He believes war is the supreme test of a man's value, and he believes a soldier should be glad to have the opportunity of undergoing such a test. He insists that his officers be as disdainful of death as he is and that they go into battle with their men. He says that taking greater risks than their men is "the privilege of an officer."

Said to be the wealthiest of American officers, Patton undergoes the hardships of war with contempt for material things. His grandfather was killed in battle and he has indicated he would not mind such an end for himself.

Patton's punishment was a severe one if it is remembered he is a man who has attached more importance to his code as an officer than anything else in his life, and that he had to admit to his whole army that he had violated that code and was guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer.

Not much is known about Patton's personal apology to the soldier. It was made privately and accepted by the soldier, and the incident was over as far as the soldier was concerned. Patton withdrew all his remarks about cowardice.

The American people were permitted to know about Patton's fine qualities as a commander as he displayed them on the battlefields in Morocco, Tunisia and Sicily, but they were not allowed to know about this incident until Pearson had told it Sunday night.

Then Allied headquarters first issued an equivocal statement, and finally this morning took the lid off and told correspondents they could write the facts, which they had known for some time.

Direct censorship was not imposed in the three and a half months' period between the incident and its publication, but the opinion had been expressed at headquarters that publication would aid the enemy, and all the correspondents refrained from writing about it.

The soldier Patton struck will remain anonymous, Allied headquarters decided. A spokesman said that since he had accepted Patton's apology, the incident was closed as far as he was concerned and no good purpose would be served in making him a marked man.

This much can be told about him: He is a private, 21 years old and married, who enlisted from a small town in the Carolinas in the Regular Army some time before the war started and who has always been a good soldier. He is now back in the line of duty.

Far more is involved in this case than the slap in the back of the head which the commanding general gave the distraught soldier. The incident has been discussed more than any other topic among the soldiers here, and ever since has been the subject of endless conversations and debates from the front line to the farthest rear base.

It has led to assertions from some soldiers that no matter how hard Patton was on them, they had confidence in him as a general who would take care of them.

It threw light on the attitude of the Army that such subjects should be kept in the family and not made public.

It showed that in an American Army there is a line beyond which no officer, no matter how exalted, can go in his treatment of the lowest private.

It focused attention on the subject of war-strain and "shell-shock," that strange condition which some officers and some doctors say does not really exist.

It has shown Patton as generous in making redress as he was reckless in committing his act.

It has raised questions of how hard a general can be on his soldiers and keep their loyalty, and whether a general can admit himself guilty of a serious offense to all his troops and keep their respect.

It gave General Eisenhower and the War Department the problem of how far to go in balancing Patton's ability as a general against his other characteristics.

It has already provoked a lively reaction in the United States.

It put to a test the command's theory that publication at the time of the apology would have helped enemy propaganda, as compared with the manner in which the Germans can be expected to exploit it.

Shortly after the Pearson broadcast, the Berlin radio issued a fantastically distorted version saying that Patton was removed after an altercation with Eisenhower.

The Army newspaper Stars and Stripes decided to publish nothing on the Patton incident. The officer in charge of the soldiers' newspaper said he had taken the decision on his own initiative.

(Similarly the European theater edition of Stars and Stripes, published in London, went to press Tuesday night wiht no mention of the Patton incident. Officers declined an official statement. Yesterday's denial that Patton hatl been officially reprimanded was carired in full by Stars and Stripes Tuesday morning.)

Letter Tells of Slapping

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 23 (AP).—Herman F. Kuhl, a Mishawaka casket maker, brought to the South Bend Tribune today a letter from his 26-year-old son, Pvt. Charles Herman Kuhl, in which the young man wrote, "General Patton slapped my face yesterday and kicked me in the pants and cussed me."

The letter indicated the soldier was in a Sicilian hospital. It was dated August 4.

"This probably won't go through," Private Kuhl wrote, "but I don't know. Just forget about it in your letters."

The elder Kuhl told the Tribune of another letter received from his son in which the soldier told of being taken from Sicily to North Africa for a hearing on the incident.

The father said his son wrote that after this hearing he was escorted to General Patton's office. Kuhl quoted his son as writing that General Patton apologized to him, shook hands with him and told him he had "acted too hastily."

Kuhl said his son was inducted into the Army last December 18 at Camp Perry, Ohio.

Private Kuhl is married to Luretta Kuhl, who is employed in a war plant at South Bend. He is the father of a 2-year-old daughter by a previous marriage.

District Officer Tells of Escape From Foe in Italy

First Lieut. Conrad Kreps, 27, who escaped from the enemy in Italy as Germans were rushing prisoners north soon after the Italian armistice, related his daring experiences Monday night to the men with whom he used to play on the gymnasium teams at the YMCA.

Sharing honors with the sandy-haired flier of the Army Air Forces was Miss Hilda Burkhart, his brown-eyed sweetheart with whom he attended YMCA dances before entering the Army in 1941. Lieut. Kreps was principal speaker at a report meeting of the organization's current membership campaign.

During the nine months in an Italian prison camp near Rome, he was not permitted to work.

"To entertain ourselves, we made a baseball out of the heels of old shoes covered with string from Red Cross packages," he recalled. "The Italians wouldn't give us bats because they were afraid we'd swat the guards."

"For 36 days, we climbed mountains and waded rivers before we reached Allied territory," he said. "The Italians were kind and some shared their last loaf of bread with us. No one thought of turning us in. When I saw the first American doughboy, he looked so wonderful that I wanted to kiss him."

Plot to Kill President Of Honduras Foiled

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Nov. 23 (AP).—A plot to assassinate President Gen. Tiburcio Carias and to kidnap his wife and daughter was uncovered Sunday, the government announced today in a communique which said several of the plotters had been arrested and had confessed.

The communique said some members of the presidential guard were among the persons involved in the plot against Gen. Carias, who has been president of Honduras since 1933. The country remained quiet.

Second Mighty Raid Strikes Paralyzed, Burning Berlin

northern France and German airfields.

Berlin is the heart of Germany's war effort because it is the center of the government and one of the country's major industrial areas, especially for electrical equipment, and it is the nation's key transportation center.

First reports from Berlin through Sweden said the immense destruction caused by last night's raid included the 200-room headquarters of the Todt organization from which Albert Speer, Reich production czar, administered the country's war production effort.

Three of the capital's world-famous streets—Unter Den Linden, the Friedrichstrasse and Alexanderplatz—were shattered. Transportation, electrical and gas service in many parts of the city were disrupted.

Adolf Hitler's private residence adjoining the Reichschancellery was destroyed by fire during last night's RAF raid on Berlin, a Reuter's Stockholm dispatch said tonight.

Siemenstadt, center of the great Siemens electrical works, was among a dozen important suburbs hit. Several foreign legations were burned and all that was left of the Swedish legation was the bomb shelter. The Finnish, Hungarian and Danish legations were either destroyed or badly damaged, reports from Stockholm said.

The huge RAF force struck around 8 o'clock, and in a few minutes had deluged miles and miles of the city from the governmental Wilhemstrasse to the key industrial suburbs with a storm of high explosives.

Recounting the "horrible hours" that followed, Berlin correspondents of Swedish newspapers gave graphic accounts of the results.

Ten thousand persons were reported killed or injured. The bombers struck in two waves, with the second group catching persons who were trapped outside air-raid shelters when the all-clear signal was mistakenly sounded.

The Germans were powerless to do anything but shoot up flak in a wild barrage which knocked down a maximum of 26 bombers, less than half of the RAF loss in the first big attack on Berlin August 28.

Solid overcast clouds prevented the Germans from sending up fighter planes and from using their searchlights to spot the British bombers, but the clouds did not hamper the bombers. They dropped their bombs through the flare outline laid down by pathfinder planes. Even through the thick clouds British crewmen reported they saw fires and explosions 70 miles away.

"It was like a terrific sunset," was the way one returning pilot described the target.

Hundreds of crewmen reported seeing one of the most violent explosions ever reported from a German target, in which everything suddenly went white and the brilliance remained in the sky long after the bombers turned away.

One pilot said he saw over 50 2-ton blockbusters go down while he was over the target.

As the bombers droned away Swedish reporters said the people emerged from the shelters, with help "totally inadequate."

As rescuers dug through the debris for trapped persons the subways and public centers filled with bombed-out families. Great piles of debris littered the streets and persons picked their way along carrying what few precious belongings they had managed to salvage.

"Berlin can never recover from this blow," a Swedish correspondent quoted Berliners as saying.

It probably will be days or weeks before aerial reconnaissance and intelligence can determine which was hurt worst—the government, industry or morale. Allied air leaders regard them as interlocking and the raid undoubtedly was a devastating combined blow.

Aside form the immediate devastation and aside from the fact it was history's worst sihgle blow, there were terrifying indications to the Germans for the future, all calculated to sap their morale to the point of fear that means surrender.

The success of the raid, despite the weather, pointed only to more and heavier raids. Anything not destroyed this time could be destroyed subsequently. Any destroyed industries transferred eastward would hardly be any better off, as Allied raids as far as Poland, Czechoslovakia and Austria already have proved.

Last night's raid, coming within less than a week after a previous record Berlin raid, indicated plainly the campaign to knock Berlin out of the war was in full swing.

The weather, so much less favorable than that of July and August during which Hamburg, a city half the size of Berlin, was knocked out in less than a week, might prolong the effort against Berlin but there are compensating factors.

Both the RAF and U. S. Air Force are much larger than they were five months ago, enabling the Allies to launch larger and more frequent attacks. In addition German defenses are more strained.

Succeeds Reckord

Hayes to Head 3d Service Command

Brig. Gen. Philip Hayes of Portage, Wis., was named yesterday by the War Department to take command of the Third Service Command—including the States of Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania—succeeding Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord of Bel Air, Md.

General Reckord's new assignment was not announced. Although the War Department did not specify the date of the change, it was understood it would be effective December 1.

General Hayes has been on duty since last July in the Army Service Forces headquarters in Washington.

Reckord, Third Service Command head since January, 1942, is 64. At the time of his transfer from the command of the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division, the War Department indicated it was in line with announced policy of relieving over-age officers from field commands.

A native of Harford County, Reckord enlisted in the Maryland National Guard February 15, 1901, was commissioned a captain December 28, 1904, served on the Mexican Border and commanded the 115th Infantry Regiment throughout its training and overseas service during World War I.

He was adjutant general of Maryland from 1920 to 1941, when the National Guard troops were mustered into Federal service, going with the Maryland Guardsmen as their chief. He is a past president of the National Guard Association of the United States.

General Hayes, 56, is a graduate of West Point, Class of 1909. After graduation, he remained at the academy as an instructor until 1916, when he was ordered to the Philippines for two years. Returning to West Point in 1919, he took over the job of post exchange officer and later became executive officer for athletics. He remained there until 1922.

Hayes' other tours of duty included the Field Artillery School at Fort Sill, Okla.; Army War College, Washington; Command and General Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., where he was an instructor for five years; Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.; Fort Knox, Ky., and Fort Shafter, Hawaii.

He was chief of staff of the Hawaiian Division in 1940 and the following year was made professor of Military Science and Tactics at Harvard. In March, 1942, he was named chief of staff for the First Service Command, Boston. He was transferred to Washington last July.

Maj. Gen. James L. Collins was named at the same time to command the Fifth Service Command with headquarters at Columbus, Ohio, replacing Maj.-Gen. Fred C. Wallace, also assigned to unannounced duties.

General Collins has served as director of administration of the Army Service Forces since May 15, 1943, and for two years prior to that time he had been commanding general of the Puerto Rican Department.

Born in New Orleans in 1882 and a graduate of the United States Military Academy, he served during the First World War as aide to Gen. John J. Pershing, as secretary of the general staff of the American Expeditionary Forces and as commander of a battalion of the Seventh Field Artillery in the Meuse-Argonne offensive.

He later served as military attache at the United States Embassy in Rome.

President Calls For Definite Security Program

Legislation to benefit veterans along the lines suggested by President Roosevelt in his message to Congress yesterday will be pressed in Congress, The Post learned yesterday.

The President asked Congress to provide mustering-out pay, unemployment allowances and social security credits for men and women in uniform.

In addition he urged the legislators in a formal message to "enact without delay" a measure setting up an unemployment insurance system in the Merchant Marine.

Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri, chairman of a veterans' subcommittee of the Finance Committee, said he would introduce a bill in the near future to have the Federal Government contribute to Social Security insurance for all members of the armed forces irrespective of rank, in accordance with the request of the President.

Patman to Press Bill

Representative Patman (Democrat) of Texas, who has introduced an omnibus veterans' bill covering most of the points discussed in the message, said he would press for its consideration.

Meanwhile Selective Service spokesmen called attention to the fact that members of the armed forces are now being discharged daily without the mustering-out pay or unemployment insurance suggested by the President. Some wounded veterans, among them paratroopers, whose compensation is delayed, have been discharged with only their current Army pay, these sources said, and have experienced hardship while trying to find employment suitable to a handicapped person.

In his message the President said:

"The Congress will agree, I am sur, that, this time, we must have plans and legislation ready for our returning veterans instead of waiting until the last moment. It will give notice to our armed forces that the people back home do not propose to let them down."

The steps which he specifically requested of Congress yesterday were part of a program of minimum assistance for those serving their country which the President outlined in a radio address to the Nation last July. This time he omitted, however, a proposal he made then that persons in the Merchant Marine be given mustering-out pay.

Suggests Monthly Statements

For those in the armed forces, he said, the mustering-out pay should be uniform and reasonable and should be paid in monthly installments, rather than in a lump sum, at the time of honorable discharge or return to inactive duty. The Chief Executive mentioned no definite amount, leaving that for Congress to determine.

For service personnel unable to get jobs within a reasonable time after they become civilians again, Mr. Roosevelt said, "Unemployment allowances should be provided until they can reasonably be absorbed by private industry."

Asserting that State unemployment insurance laws give inadequate coverage to members of the armed forces, the President said about half of them would have no protection whatsoever when they doff their uniforms. Benefits for others will vary widely and in many instances will be inadequate, he said, so Congress ought to set up a uniform system of allowances, with a fixed rate of benefit for a fixed period of time.

Noting that railway workers had been covered by an unemployment insurance act since 1938, the Chief Executive said a similar act for maritime workers was "long overdue." He expressed belief that such legislation would be the most effective way of protecting them against postwar unemployment.

Mr. Roosevelt reminded Congress that members of the armed forces receive no credit for their period of military service under the Federal old-age and survivors' insurance law and suggested that such credit be established. The burden should be carried by Federal contributions, he said, which would be uniform for all in service irrespective of rank.

Emphasizing the need for planning for peace even while we concentrate on winning the war, Mr. Roosevelt declared that service men and women, more than all else, want "assurance of satisfactory employment upon their return to civil life." The first task after the war, he said, is to provide jobs for them and for demobilized warworkers.

Carol's Talk Canceled by U. S. Censors

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Columbia Broadcasting System announced today that the office of censorship had canceled authorization of the broadcast of former King Carol of Rumania and that as a result neither Carol nor any of his opponents wil lbe heard in a broadcast originally scheduled for tonight.

CBS said the office of censorship, at 1 p. m., issued this statement to it:

"Owing to considerations that we are not at liberty to disclose, we find it necessary to cancel the previously authorized use of the lines from Mexico City for the scheduled broadcast tonight by former King Carol of Rumania."

CBS said the text of Carol's proposed broadcast was submitted to censorship last Saturday, that it was approved and leaders of anti-Carol movements in the United States were asked to nominate a spokesman to speak on the same program after Carol finished reading his statement from Mexico City.

Civitans Told Lack of Sleep Is Foe in War

Lack of sleep is the most potent and dangerous foe a nation at war has to face and but for modern developments of science it might have given the Nazis the victory in the Battle for England, R. M. Cotton, special assistant director general to the British Air Commission, told members of the Civitan Club at yesterday's luncheon in the Mayflower.

Cotton, an American citizen, is on an undisclosed mission here.

"When the bombings of London were at greatest intensity the few RAF fliers England had could not have coped with the Nazis if it had been necessary to keep them on air patrol constantly. Science gave them help by warning of approaching planes and they got brief respites of sleep," he said.

Tells of Heavy Tasks

At the time of Dunkirk, Cotton was actually a modern Yankee in King Arthur's Court, as managing director of the British Rola, Ltd. and he introduced Yankee manufacturing methods.

He described how his bombed-out factories in the London area were moved more than 200 miles into "the provinces" by lories without the aid of mechanical machinery such as cranes to lift them. More than 400 long tons were moved to buildings, among which was an unused theater, installed and in operation within 21 days.

Dunkirk, he said, was the tragic awakening of the British Isles to a grim unity that victory must be won "if the nation was to survive."

England's manufacturing production, he disclosed, is two and a half times ours on the basis of manpower. He said this was due to the fact that every able-bodied person in England between 16 and 60 was working and sometimes the work week stretched to 72 hours.

England's economics he described as having developed a phase of absolutism. "There are no war babies," he said. "A manufacturer fixes his profit level at the maximum for either 1936, 1937 or 1938. Anything above the selected figure is confiscated."

Cotton has spent the past nine years in England as managing director of Rola, Ltd., radio and aircraft engine accessories, and early in the war became associated with the British Air Commission. He was called for active duty in the United States Navy, in which he held a reserve commission, but at the request of Lord Beaverbrook was deferred and loaned to the British Government.

Construction Halted At Aluminum Plant

The War Production Board reported yesterday that a new aluminum construction plant, that of the Phelps-Dodge Copper Porduction Corp. at Hammond, Ind., had been halted.

Part of a general cut-back in aluminum facilities, the revocation of priority ratings followed by about two weeks shutdowns of a 16 million dollar aluminum plant at Memphis, Tenn., and a similar plant at Columbus, Nebr.

AFL Is Seeking Davis' Renomination

By the Associated Press

In response to inquiries, American Federation of Labor sources said today that President William Green has started a labor drive for renomination of Senator James J. Davis (Republican) of Pennsylvania, whom the federation has supported in previous campaigns.

"We have supported Davis in the past and Davis has supported AFL proposals," said a Green assistant.

'World RFC' Plan Outlined By Morgenthau

By Donald Kovacic
Associated Press Staff Writer

Making public a comprehensive but still unofficial outline for a proposed 10-billion-dollar "world RFC"—for which the United States would put up one-third of the money—Secretary Morgenthau declared late yesterday in a memorandum to Congress:

"To spend hundreds of billions to fight a war thrust upon us and then to balk at investing a few billions to help assure peace and prosperity would appear to be a singularly unwise policy."

The projected "United Nations Bank for Reconstruction and Development" would encourage and supplement loans of private capital not only to rebuild war-damaged areas but to maintain permanently "a high level of business activity throughout the world."

Funds would be subscribed by member nations under a formula based on national income and volume of foreign trade. This country's initial outlay for participation would amount to approximately 667 million dollars, of which not more than 133 million dollars would be in gold.

Largely a technical amplification of terse "guiding principles" for such a bank made public more than a month ago, last night's preliminary draft outline is intended, Morgenthau said, "only to stimulate thoughtful discussion in the hope that (it) will call forth constructive criticism, suggestions and alternative proposals for possible later submission to the appropriate authorities and to the public."

The project thus takes its place with a proporsed 8-billion-dollar international stabilization fund, similarly drafted by Harry D. White, Treasury monetary expert, with the objective of promoting world trade by halting wild fluctuations in money values.

The British also have put forward a stabilization plan based, however, on a clearing union rather than a specific fund pegged to gold, and the two countries still are at variance after months of discussions.

The outline for the bank, Morgenthau said, also has been sent to finance ministers of all United and Associated Nations "for consideration and study."

White, explaining the proposal at a press conference, said the project was entirely American in origin and had not yet been discussed with any other country.

He expressed hope, however, that an international conference to consider both the bank and stabilization plans could be held some time during the winter.

Asserting he would be "surprised" if member countries of the proposed bank were called upon for more than the original 20 per cent subscription, White said United States participation in both proposals could be achieved by an appropriation of "something over" three billion dollars. This country's contribution to the stabilization fund has been estimated at $2,500,000,000.

Britain's share in the fund would be about $1,500,000,000 and in the total bank capital about one billion dollars, which would call for $1,700,000,000 in cash to participate in both institutions, White said, adding that Russia's share would be "substantially smaller" than Britain's in each case.

Books of the world bank would be kept in terms of "unitas"—the international monetary unit envisaged in White's stabilization plan—although loans would be made in the currency of the country in which the money was to be spent.

NO BETTER WHISKEY IN THE WORLD

Oil Project Vital, Patterson Says

ports of the five globe-girdling Senators who said the United States was exhausting its petroleum resources unnecessarily.

"The Canol project, so far as I know," Patterson said, "is the first major venture of the United States Government in oil production on foreign soil. After our experience with gasoline rationing and the serious depletion of our own crude oil reserves, I believe that the American people may favor similar ventures in the near future."

Not Yet Producing

Patterson's formal statement disclosed that hundreds of planes are being delivered to Russia over a busy ferry route through Canada and Alaska. The Canol project, however, has not yet yielded Canadian oil to service them.

Patterson's assertion that the "War Department is proud of Canol," caused Committee Counsel Hugh Fulton to smile and started a four-cornered argument, which included a clash between Chairman Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, and Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas.

"What are you smiling at?" Patterson snapped at Fulton.

"At the idea that you regard 479 barrels of gasoline a day (the maximum the committee estimates the project will yield) as so important that you want to get it irrespective of how much it costs in shipping, transportation, materials, and manpower," Fulton replied.

Connally interrupted to exclaim that the Undersecretary for War was not being treated with courtesy. Truman's face flushed angrily as he came to the counsel's defense.

"We have a whole stack of records here on this matter and I am not going to have the committee counsel prevented from pursuing his questions," Truman asserted.

"I don't think this project was justified," continued the energetic investigator of wartime expenditures.

Authorized by Somervell

Patterson admitted that he personally had known little about the Canol project. It was authorized, he revealed, by Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of the Army's Services of Supply.

Committee officials said yesterday's hearings would not close until Semervell returned to Washington and could give testimony on the matter.

Meanwhile, Truman and several other members of the committee took the position that the project was undertaken after a one-day conference with experts of the Imperial Oil Co. of Canada, Army officials and James H. Graham, dollar-a-year assistant to Somervell, a Kentucky University professor.

"The whole project was economically cockeyed from the beginning," Graham said. "In peacetime it would be unsound, but in war you cannot consider cost, and we proceeded solely on the basis of military necessity."

Asked if it was not true that it would cost 10 times less and take 10 times less time to deliver the oil by barge than try to develop the Canol project, Graham retorted.

"What of it?"

Senator Ferguson (Democrat) of Michigan asserted at that point that further questioning of the witness was unnecessary.

After the hearing Ferguson told reporters that the waste of dollars involved in the Canol project did not represent a loss of moeny alone, but a terrific waste of transportation facilities, manpower, and material.

Gen. Allen Now Training Division In Western U. S.

Maj. Gen. Terry Allen, who commanded the famous First Division in Tunisia and Sicily, has been back in the United States for two months as commander of another outfit.

The War Department disclosed yesterday that "Terrible Terry," who once told an interviewer "I'm getting tougher as I go along," came back in September to take command of the 104th Infantry Division to Camp Young, Calif., in the California-Arizona maneuver area. (Formerly known as the desert training center.)

No explanation of Allen's reassignment was given.

10 Nazi Terrorists Named by Poles For Ghetto Acts

London, Nov. 22.—Ten Germans connected with administration in Nazi-occupied Poland were named in London today as being responsible for the slaughter of thousands of Polish Jews, especially in the Warsaw ghetto.

The names, revealed at a press conference today by Dr. Ignacy Schwarzbart—a member of the Polish national council—were:

Pischer, governor of the district of Warsaw; Leist, S. S. (Elite Guard) group leader and Nazi mayor of Warsaw; Dr. Auerswald, commissar for the Warsaw Ghetto until July, 1942; Rheinhardt, chief of "the Annihilation Squad"; Heyman, a leading member of the squad; Schoen, who in 1940 was the principal organizer of the Warsaw Ghetto as a means of registration of Jews preparatory to their extermination; Tebenov, chief of the deportation office responsible to Berlin for the supervision of deporting Jews marked for execution; Brandt, S. S. chief in charge of Jewish affairs who personally shot many Jews — according to Dr. Schwarzbart.

The other two men were: Seifert, chief of "Transferstelle," an organization which gradually reduced food supplies to the Ghetto; and Begrens, who was responsible for Jewish slave labor.

U. S. Junior Chamber of Commerce President

gives you his "Pick of the Post" on the newsstands today

Compare your choice with that of H. Bruce Palmer in this week's new Post

H. Bruce Palmer, young insurance executive of Flint, Michigan, believes that young business men hold the responsibility for America's future progress. For this reason, he has for years devoted his time and energy to increasing the effectiveness of local Junior Chambers of Commerce in his home state. Since 1939, he has been active in the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce, holding several important offices in this organization. At the 24th Annual Meeting of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce this year, Bruce Palmer was elected President of this active, hard-working group. Mr. Palmer says:

"Our job is to look ahead . . . to see where America is going. And then to see that it gets there fast. The new Saturday Evening Post is a big help on this job, because in its pages the America of today is graphically portrayed, as well as the dreams and aspirations of the men who are shaping the America of tomorrow. I wouldn't miss the Post. It's part of my job . . . and a big part of my relaxing hours, too."

1. BILLION-DOLLAR PLANE BUILDER

by Alva Johnston

"FROM RAGS TO RICHES' is a favorite American theme . . . in fiction and true life. But no place is it more dramatically set down than in the story of Donald Douglas. He started building airplanes on a shoestring, and today his vast plants produce close to one-sixth of America's fighting aircraft. It's stories like these that renew everyone's faith in the future of free enterprise . . . and of America, too."

2. CAMP FOLLOWER

by Robert Carson

"WHEN I light up my pipe in the evening, I reach for some good fiction. And that means I reach for the new Post. Top honors this week go to this story about a young girl faced with the choice between a successful, well-to-do playwright and a young man in a uniform. And her decision comes in for some pretty discouraging treatment before the Number Two man is ready to take 'No' for an answer."

3. JOBS FOR HALF A MILLION

by John Bird

"THE Post's editor, Ben Hibbs, sure hit a hot one in this article. The conservation of our precious top soil could well be the most important job for postwar planners. America has the 'know how' to rescue our fertile farm lands from destruction. Two things lacking are man-hours and money—which should be available in the postwar transition period . . . once the results of such a project are known."

Navy Asks Billions For Landing Craft

Steinbeck's View

Destroyer Most Gallant Fighting Ship

By John Steinbeck

A destroyer is a lovely ship, probably the nicest fighting ship of all. Battleships are a little like steel cities or great factories of destruction. Aircraft carriers are floating flying fields. Even cruisers are big pieces of machinery, but a destroyer is all boat. In the beautiful clean lines of her, in her speed and roughness, in her curious gallantry, she is completely a ship, in the old sense.

For one thing, a destroyer is small enough so that her captain knows his whole crew personally, knows all about each one as a person, his first name and his children and the trouble he has been in and is capable of getting into. There is an ease on a destroyer that is good and a good relationship among the men. Then if she has a good captain you have something really worth serving on.

Destroyers Always at Work

The battleships are held back for a killing blow and such a blow sometimes happens only once in a war. The cruisers go in second, but the destroyers work all the time. They are probably the busiest ships of a fleet. In a major engagement, they do the scouting and make the first contact. They convoy, they run to every fight. Wherever there is a mess, the destroyers run first. They are not lordly like the battleships, nor episcopal like the cruisers. Most of all they are ships and the men who work them are seamen. In rough weather they are rough, honestly and violently rough.

A destroyer-man is never bored in wartime, for a destroyer is a seaman's ship. She can get under way at the drop of a hat. The water under fantail boils like a Niagara. She will go rippling along at 35 knots with the spray sheeting over her and she will turn and fight and run, drop depth charges, bombard and ram. She is expendable and dangerous. And because she is all these things, a destroyer's crew is passionately possessive. Every man knows his ship, every inch of it, not just his own station.

The destroyer X is just such a ship. She has done many thousands of miles since the war started. She has been bombed and torpedoes have gone under her bow. She has convoyed and fought. Her captain is a young, dark-haired man and his executive officer looks like a blond undergraduate. The ship is immaculate. The engines are polished and painted and shined.

A Fairly New Ship

She is a fairly new ship, the X, commissioned 15 months ago. She bombarded at Casablanca and Gela and Salerno and she has cptured islands. Her officers naturally would like to go to larger ships because there is more rank to be had on them, but no destroyerman would rather sail on anything else.

The destroyer X is a personal ship and a personality. She is worked quietly. No one ever raises his voice. The captain is softspoken and so is every one else. Orders are given in the same low tone as requests for salt in the wardroom. The discipline is exact and punctilious but it seems to be almost mutually enforced, not from above. The captain will say—"So many men have shore leave. The first man who comes back drunk removes shore liberty for every one." It is very simple. The crew would discipline any one who jeopardized the liberty of the whole ship. So they come back in good shape and on time. The X has very few brig cases.

When the X is in a combat area she never relaxes. The men sleep in their clothes. The irritating blatting sound which means Action Stations is designed to break through sleep. It sounds like the braying of some metallic mule, and the reaction to it is instant. There is a scurrying of feet in the passageways and the clatter of feet on the ladders and in a few seconds the X is bristling with manned and waiting guns, AA's that peer at the sky and the 5-inch guns which can fire at the sky, too.

The crouched and helmeted men can get to their stations in less than a minute. There is no hurry nor fuss. They have done it hundreds of times. And then a softspoken word from the bridge into a telephone will turn the X into a fire-breathing dragon. She can throw tons of steel in a very short time.

One of the strangest things is to see her big guns when they go on automatic control. They are aimed and fired from the bridge. The turret and the guns have been heavy dead metal and suddenly they become alive. The turret whips around but it is the guns themselves that seem to live. They balance and quiver almost as though they were sniffing the air. They tremble like the antennae of an insect, listening or smelling the target. Suddenly they set and instantly there is a belch of sound and the shells float away. The tracers seem to float interminably before they hit. And before the shells have struck the guns are trembling and reaching again. They are like rattlesnakes poising to strike, and they really do seem to be alive. It is a frightening thing to see.

Senate and House Bills Indicate Invasion Plans

Indicating large-scale plans for future invasions by American armies, Chairman Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia of the House Naval Committee yesterday introduced a bill calling for construction or acquisition of five billion dollars worth of landing craft and auxiliary vessels.

Vinson acted on the Navy's request in offering the bill.

Companion legislation appeared in the Senate where Senator Walsh (Democrat) of Massachusetts introduced a measure authorizing the Navy to build or acquire one million tons of landing and patrol craft and 2,500,000 tons of auxiliary vessels.

Walsh said the ships were for use in amphibious operations.

Vinson stated the Navy would need the five billion dollars worth of equipment in addition to supplies for which appropriations already have been made. He added that he knew nothing about the Navy planning to turn back several billions of dollars already appropriated, as was reported last week.

Earlier yesterday, Secretary of Navy Knox said that American Marines battling in the Gilbert Islands are building a direct route to Japan and opening new supply lanes to speed men and equipment to the Southwest Pacific.

The Navy Secretary listed the dual purpose for the landings on Tarawa, Makin and Abemama in the Gilberts as:

1. Driving the Japanese out of the mandated islands.

2. Shortening by hundreds of miles American supply lines to the Southwest Pacific.

"This operation," he said, "is the beginning of a new campaign against the Japs from the Central Pacific on a much more direct route to Japan."

With the Gilberts in American hands, he said, cargo craft will be able to travel on an almost direct line to the Southwest Pacific instead of following a circuitous route to the south.

Knox suggested an 800-mile circle about Tarawa as the area in which American air dominance will be felt immediately after the Japanese are driven from the group.

Such an area not only would provide air protection for shipping lanes far to the north or south of the Gilberts but also would provide American planes with bases from which to slash northward against Japanese bases in the Marshall group.

Arkansas Jury Acquits Girl Who Slew Stepfather

Melbourne, Ark., Nov. 23 (AP).—A 21-year-old girl was acquitted of a first-degree murder charge last night after she told a jury she shot her stepfather in what seemed "a crazy dream" because he forced her to have improper relations with him.

After deliberating an hour and a half, an Izard Circuit Court jury of Ozark Hill farmers freed redhaired Mary Catherine Durant in connection with the death of 43-year-old Charles W. Durant.

The girl collapsed into her mother's arms.

Gen. Maxwell and 11 Others Decorated by Britain's King

Maj. Gen. Russell Lamont Maxwell, U. S. Army, of 4000 Cathedral ave. nw., was presented the decoration of the Honorary Companion of the Military Division of the Order of the Bath yesterday afternoon by Lord Halifax, British Ambassador, at the British Embassy residence.

Lord Halifax, who also decorated 10 other United States officers and a former American member of the Royal Air Force Volunteer Reserve, declared at the ceremony:

"It is a great pleasure to be allowed on behalf of His Majesty the King to bestow these decorations this afternoon and I feel myself highly honored on so doing. I regard it as a particular privilege to have the opportunity of handing some of these decorations to the relatives of those men who have given all they had to give in the service of the common cause."

In the citation read by Rex Benson, British Military Attache, General Maxwell was commended for his service as commanding general of the United States Forces in the Middle East and later as commanding general of Service and Supply, "when he performed with great ability to the British army in the ability services to the British army in the Middle East which were of outstanding importance and of the very greatest assistance to our military efforts."

The citation continued: "General Maxwell at all times, and in face of every difficulty, showed a willing determination to promote by every means in his power the development of satisfactory relations between the British forces and the forces of the United States."

It was explained that General Maxwell's assistance in connection with the provision of units and materials for the Trans-Persian Railway and the ports of the Persian Gulf were not only of great advantage to the British forces employed in that area but in no small measure helped the Allied cause as a whole by furthering aid to Russia through those channels of supply.

Another recipient of the high award was Maj. Gen. Charles H. Bonesteel of Tampa, Fla., whose wife and daughter-in-law lived in Washington while he was in command of United Nations forces in Iceland last year.

Prisoner Aided, Woman Fined

London, Nov. 23.—A 32-year-old English woman who, according to her attorney, had led a sheltered life and was educated in a convent, was fined £20 ($800), with the alternative of serving two months in prison, in Kent police court yesterday for giving an Italian prisoner a compass likely to facilitate his escape.

The prisoner denied he received the compass, and when Miss Kathleen Benlain was informed of this she said: "He is trying to shield me." Her attorney told the court the prisoner made a dupe of her and that his client was the type of person who thought motion picture performances were true.

Charles Ray Of Silent Film Fame Dies

Hollywood, Nov. 23 (AP).—Charles Ray, 52, who gained national fame for his portrayal of country bumpkin roles on the silent screen, died today after a long illness.

RAY

The actor, who made a great fortune as an actor only to lose most of it through an ill-starred venture as a film producer, had been in Cedars of Lebanon Hospital for five weeks suffering from a malignant throat infection.

Ray was born in Jacksonville, Ill., in 1891, and came here as a youth. His beginning as an actor was humble, and his first film job was reported to have paid him only $30 a week.

The peculiar naivete with which he played his bucolic roles took the public imagination and at the height of his success he was reported to be getting a salary of $11,000 a week.

Equal Rights Measure Support Is Urged

More than 100 women from nearby Virginia counties assembled at the Purcellville Woman's Club at Purcellville, Va., last Friday, unanimously adopted a resolution asking for an equal rights amendment to the Federal Constitution.

The suggested amendment, mailed last night to members of the Virgina Legislature, State judges and other interested groups, asks that "equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex."

Girl Air Stowaway Reaps 'Reward'

Montreal, Nov. 23 (AP).—Called the first person to fly from England to Canada as a stowaway, Margaret Drury, 24-year-old Lancashire ground mechanic, filled in the details last night on how she did it.

Her ankles puffed from standing in the nose wheel compartment of a Liberator for 19 hours, the girl, who arrived Sunday, held up a pair of stockings some one gave her here and said:

"I'm jolly sorry for all the trouble I'm causing, but these stockings are certainly worth the trip."

Miss Drury wanted to fly, "but there are so many other women in Britain with the same idea that I was afraid the war would be over before I could get an opportunity. So I stole a ride to Canada . . ."

She has collected such home-rare items as a girdle "with real elastic," and a jar of foundation cream, and has had eggs—real eggs—twice a day since her arrival.

Sicilian Slapping Incident May Cost General Patton a Promotion

after graduation from the Military Academy in June, 1909) were certain to be asked in connection with the legislation.

But both Kilday and Chairman Andrew J. May of the Military Committee said they would oppose a committee investigation of the slapping.

"It is a shocking thing to the morale of the mothers of this country and a congressional investigation would only make it more shocking," said May.

Matter for Military

Kilday said he opposed a legislative inquiry because "it occurred on the fighting front and is plainly a matter for the military."

Representative John J. Sparkman (Democrat) of Alabama, another member of the committee, said he had intended to demand an investigation nonetheless, but as a member of the late Representative Henry B. Steagall's funeral party he will not be present at the meeting.

Sparkman said Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had not hesitated to relieve at least two other generals under his command for other reasons, and he could not understand why Patton was not similarly dealt with.

On the other side of the Capitol, Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat) of Florida voiced "surprise" that General Eisenhower "didn't order a court martial." Said Pepper: "No officer should be allowed to abuse a soldier."

Mead Speaks for Patton

One of the few who spoke out in Patton's behalf was Senator James M. Mead (Democrat) of New York, one of the five Senators who recently toured world battle fronts. Mead said there was a possibility of "extenuating circumstances about which we know nothing here 3000 miles away."

While formal action on the Army permanent promotion list awaited House passage of legislation removing the years of service barrier for five of the officers nominated, some members of the Senate Military Committee pointed out that Patton's 34 years of service would normally have qualified him without further legislation. But for the lack of 28 years service by these fellow candidates for promotion, they said Patton would have been confirmed for permanent major general's rank before the Sicilian episode dimmed his chances.

Other members of the committee said the "real reason" the list has been held up nearly two months was because Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell was among the officers nominated for permanent promotion to major general.

Before the high command apparently settled on General Eisenhower to succeed Gen. George C. Marshall as chief of staff, Somervell's name had been mentioned for the post. Senatorial critics of Somervell are understood to have feared his confirmation might place him in line to succeed Marshall, an eventuality they were determined to block. Recently they are reported to have received assurances that Somervell will be permanently assigned instead to supply duties.

No De Marigny Plea to Enter U. S. Yet

Nassau, Bahamas, Nov. 23 (AP).—Nancy Oakes de Marigny said today she and her husband, Alfred de Marigny, had not applied for admission to the United States since De Marigny's acquittal on a charge of murdering her father, Sir Harry Oakes.

"We have lots of business here to clear up before we can make definite plans," the 19-year-old daughter of the slain baronet stated "It is imperative that I go to the United States for an operation. That is the only place it can be done and it will be long and painful.

"I hope Freddie can be with me."

Dear Mother & Dad—is finished over here
This should reach you about Thanksgiving. Remember the good old days ... turkey and all the trimmings? Well, they'll be back again. Perhaps not soon, but they will. You can bank on that. And its something each of us can be thankful for.
All of us are mighty proud and thankful for the wonderful support you folks at home are giving us. Tell everyone you know to keep up the good work. The more they do the easier it is for us.
With all my love to everyone

PLEASE SPARE THIS "TURKEY"
FOR WAR NEEDS—DON'T USE
LONG DISTANCE AROUND THANKSGIVING

The Army, the Navy and the Essential Industries of the Country (not to mention the Telephone Company) will be thankful if you will not make Long Distance calls around and on Thanksgiving.

Reason is, of course, the telephone network just can't handle the load—and it can't be enlarged because the necessary materials are going into the shooting—instead of the talking—side of war.

So, if you have Thanksgiving greetings to extend, please use some other method than Long Distance. The war needs, and must have, the wires.

Thank you for listening—and cooperating.

approached an agreement on a proposed coal price increase to cover the cost of the new contract, with OPA indicating a willingness to raise soft-coal prices an additional 5 cents a ton over the previous offer of an average increase of 15 cents a ton.

Lewis reportedly told the operators that he did not "pretend to know what the War Labor Board will do" with the contract proposal, and as far as coal prices were concerned, "that's your funeral."

The Ickes-Lewis agreement was signed to end the fourth general coal strike this year and was approved by the War Labor Board under protest. Ickes has told the coal operators that he does not plan to restore their mines to them until they sign an agreement with Lewis.

Lump Pay Proposed

Southern coal operators proposed that the "portal-to-portal" method of payment prescribed in the Ickes-Lewis agreement be scrapped for the old agreement governing the mines, with the understanding that miners would receive a lump payment of the additional money needed to bring the miners' weekly wage up to the Ickes-Lewis level of $57.06¼.

Under the Southern proposal, revealed by former Senator Edward R. Burke, spokesman for the Southern group, miners would actually put in eight hours' work mining coal, irrespective of travel time under ground. Under the Ickes-Lewis agreement, mines with more than 45 minutes travel time underground a day have proportionately less work time mining coal, although an 8-hour workday is "assumed."

Increases Approved

Estimating that the assumed extra hour of work proved by the Ickes-Lewis pact would be about 50 per cent productive, OPA, it was reported, was prepared to permit soft-coal prices to go up an average of 20 cents a ton, instead of its previous figure of 15 cents, allowing soft-coal boosts ranging up to 30 cents in some areas. Ickes had previously argued for a 25-cents-a-ton coal-price increase, with operators contending that an average of 40 to 50 cents was needed.

A boost of 65 cents a ton for anthracite producers, to drop down to 40 cents within six months, also was reported in the offing, instead of the 60 cents, dropping to 30 cents proposed by OPA originally.

The two agencies came nearer to agreements after Ickes receded somewhat from his contention that the new contract called for much less work than he told the War Labor Board it would provide when he was defending its wage provisions.

House Beats Down Changes, Votes for Ban on Subsidies

the subsidy ban extend also to soybeans, cottonseed and peanuts—"to show you really are opposed to subsidies." This was beaten, 147 to 34.

Patman was prepared to offer a motion to recommit the measure to the House Banking Committee, with instructions to strike out the subsidy section, but Representative Carter (Republican) of California beat him to the draw with a simple motion to recommit.

Under House rules, only one recommittal proposition is permitted—and Carter's was scored down by a voice vote.

House Majority Leader McCormick, in a last-minute plea, declared the subsidy ban would "prove a heavy blow to millions of consumers with fixed incomes." Price Administrator Chester Bowles has said withdrawal of the Administration's 800 million dollar subsidy structure from the price control system would mean an automatic increase of about 7 per cent in retail prices of food.

Throughout the afternoon, Congressmen voiced their irritation at OPA policies. Representative Gifford (Republican) of Massachusetts declared he was receiving scorching letters from his district about the scarcity of feed for poultry flocks. "Those to whom we have delegated the power are not coming to our rescue," he said.

Attacks Corn Ceiling

Representative Sumner (Republican) of Illinois said the feed shortage situation could be remedied easily if OPA would permit the price ceiling on corn to go up.

Representative Hope (Republican of Kansas said corn worth a dollar a bushel in cash on the farm is worth near $1.40 a bushel when fed to hogs and said the relationship between corn and other food prices has been permitted to get out of line.

Representative Fish (Republican) of New York said the farm situation was so bad in his district "the person who used to be known as our leading farmer—Franklin D. Roosevelt—no longer claims to be a farmer at all, but is known now as a Christmas tree distributor." Another farmer near his home, he said—Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau—has gone completely out of the dairy business "because it is uneconomic to stay in" and is now a "horticulturist."

Barkley Asks Rail Pay Compromise

bill predicted that unless this plan or one equally acceptable to the brotherhood is worked out, the 8-cent-an-hour flat increase approved by an emergency board May 24 and agreed to August 7 by management and labor, will be approved by both the Senate and the House.

Wage Stabilizer Vinson recently warned the Senate subcommittee that a congressional overrider would so impair the Little Steel formula that "the executive department, would in all fairness, be compelled to abandon it for other groups."

Found Unacceptable

Vinson had indorsed instead the findings of a second emergency board for sliding scale increases ranging from 10 cents an hour for workers receiving 46 cents an hour or less, to a 4-cent increase for workers paid 97 cents an hour or over. This was unacceptable to the brotherhoods, who laid their case before Congress while proceeding to take a strike ballot.

In the current conversations Vinson is being urged by Administration Senators to modify the second emergency board finding, on a 7 to 10 cent sliding scale basis, to avert a possible crack-up in stabilization machinery.

Ill Duce Reported Fighting His Way Back to Health

Bern, Nov. 23 (AP).—Benito Mussolini, aged and sick, is fighting his way back to health, the Italian correspondent of the German newspaper Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung said today in a report of a visit to the former Italian dictator.

(A round-about dispatch from Zurich, Switzerland, reaching London via Stockholm Monday night said Mussolini was reported to have committed suicide at his Lake Garda Villa. This report could not be confirmed.)

Mussolini, who has spoken only once on the radio since he was released from captivity by the Germans and has not appeared since, is now living at a villa in an unnamed locality—believed to be near Lake Garda—where the German correspondent said the head of the puppet Fascist government was guarded by Italian Fascist and German soldiers.

Court to Decide Hour Status of U. S. Cafe Clerks

Judge Thomas Dewey Quinn of Municipal Court was asked yesterday to decide whether clerical employes of the Welfare and Recreation Association are limited to an eight-hour day.

The association was charged with working some of its clerks for as long as 13½ hours in a day and of failing to keep required records.

John Cross, attorney for the association, nonprofit operator of all Government-owned cafeterias here, admitted the violations, but denied the law pertains to his organization on the ground that while restaurant and cafeteria help are under the eight-hour law, the clerks were in a separate building and not legally cafeteria employes.

Judge Quinn took the case under advisement after Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert Wise said hotels also employ clerks but don't try to evade compliance with the law.

British Repulse Nazi Counterblow

Eighth Army had captured Castel di Sangro, a town of 5000 on the Sangro which had been a stronghold of the Nazi Italian line.

[Castel di Sangro was reported in a field dispatch earlier this week to have been fired by the Germans in evident preparation for evacuation.]

While Eighth Army troops repelled the thrust toward Agnone, taken by Montgomery's veterans three days ago, other units cleared the enemy from additional heights overlooking Alfedena from the southeast. These units were within a few miles of the upper reaches of the Sangro.

Still a "Sea of Mud"

American troops wiped out a German machine-gun nest northwest of Montaquila on the right wing of the Fifth Army front, without suffering a single loss.

Although less rain fell in the past day and night, a headquarters communique said the battle area still was a "sea of mud" and streams were in flood. Heavy motorized equipment—backbone of the Allied armies—scarcely had moved from its tracks for a fortnight. The floods were expected to subside early in December.

Central Pacific Progress Hailed

retary of the Navy Knox that the Japanese fleet was no nearer than Truk, its pivotal base about 1300 miles northwest of the Gilberts. The spokesman did say, "We're getting along all right; the operations speak for themselves."

The importance of Tarawa to any central Pacific bombing raids was clearly shown in these figures:

It is only 294 nautical miles from Tarawa to Mili, 338 to Jaluit, 593 to Kwajalein, 525 to Votje and approximately 1000 to Einwetok—enemy bases in the Marshall Islands to the north. Mili is at the southern end of that group, Eniwetok at the northern extremity.

All of these bases are 704 miles closer from Tarawa than from Funafuti, in the Ellice Islands, from where the Army's Seventh Air Force previously had bombed the Gilberts and the Marshalls and also Nauru, important phosphate island west of the Gilberts. (This was the first definite disclosure of the Seventh Air Force's base.)

The communique said that raids were being continued against the Marshalls by carrier aircraft and Army Liberators. These raids, at first diversionary, also were designed to pin down the enemy's air power in that area.

Nauru, hit by Liberator bombers on November 21, was reported to be so badly damaged by recent aerial strikes that the enemy presumably was unable to use it as a base for the defense against the current landing.

A fleet spokesman disclosed today that the November 21 raid also extended to Ocean Island, southeast of Nauru. He said it was made by the 13th Air Force and Navy land-based bombers from Admiral William F. Halsey's South Pacific command.

Truk is still just outside the range of current American bombers, but the capture of bases in the Marshalls, the next logical central Pacific move, would shorten the distance to about a thousand miles.

The combined forces assaulting the Gilberts include construction units which could quickly repair Tarawa's runways, damaged by a week of sustained raids. Navy construction battalions and Army engineers have done amazingly fast rebuilding jobs in the Solomons and there is no reason to doubt they can repeat on Tarawa.

Zhitomir on the Zhitomir-Korosten railway, while Brusilov—mentioned for the first time by the Russians—is 36 miles east of Zhitomir and only 45 miles west of Kiev—suggesting new German gains toward the Ukraine capital.

The Moscow midnight communique, recorded by the Soviet monitor from a broadcast, said the Germans were paying a high price for their assault, as Soviet infantrymen, tankmen and gunners put up stiff resistance. Russian planes struck massed blows at German lines "and at their reserves which were brought up," it said.

Nineteen German planes were reported shot down in air combat in this area.

The heaviest air battles in many weeks were indicated in the Soviet communique which told of 64 German planes shot down in three sectors. More than 5000 Germans were reported killed in the day's fighting on all fronts.

"...A-way down South in Dixie"

THERE'S a new tune in the air in our Southland these days. And it's sweet music to the ears of America's fighting men.

You hear it in the vibrant roar of great Southern mills and factories...

You hear it in the ceaseless clatter of Southern shipyards...

You hear it in the busy hum that rises from Southern farms and forests and mines...

And you hear it in the deep voice of powerful Southern Railway locomotives and in the endless rumble of the Southern's freight trains.

It's the song of the South today... the hustling, wartime Southland, served by the Southern Railway System and dedicated, above all else, to speeding the day of final Victory.

And after the war is won, this great and growing Southland will turn to the rich, rewarding tasks of Peace.

Then, new and better products will come from modern Southern industries.

Then, new wonders will spring from Southern research laboratories.

Then, Southern forests and farmlands, mills and mines, will bustle with peacetime activity.

Then, the men and women of the Southern Railway System will make good use of the lessons they're learning under the pressures of war...to speed the peacetime commerce of the Greater South to an eager world...from "A-way down South in Dixie."

Shipments Ease Gas Shortage; More Due by Barge, Pipeline

A five to six days' supply of gasoline, or 50,000 barrels, was in the city yesterday, according to a report made by the Petroleum Administration for War, thus ending the current shortage, it was said.

At the same time it was asserted there was expected to be shipped here by barge from Richmond, the terminus of the Plantation pipe line, 13,500 barrels which are to arrive on either November 28 or 29, a spokesman for the oil agency said.

In addition, there is due to arrive an unspecified quantity of gasoline from Steubenville, Ohio, by pipeline. The PAW spokesman was unable to give the quantity expected by this transportation method.

While there is every likelihood there will be ample gasoline in the city, PAW officials said, it is probable that many filling stations will not be able to fill their tanks as they have exhausted their quota for this period.

Contributing to the gasoline shortage has been the rush of motorists to fill their tanks, when possible, in order to indulge in holiday driving, Government officials asserted.

1087 Ships Made In Kaiser Yards Since Jan. 1, 1941

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Henry J. Kaiser, shipbuilder and industrialist, disclosed tonight that his yards have launched 1087 ships since January 1941.

Addressing the Economic Club of New York, Kaiser said 985 of these were Liberty ships, 40 or more were tank-landing ships, 12 were aircraft carriers, 40 were large fast tankers, and "2 or 3 were troop transports with 7 decks, carrying 4000 passengers."

"Before many months have passed there will be 50 aircraft carriers launched," he added.

Twins Lead Blood Donor Line of 900

First of 900 of the soldiers at Georgetown University to volunteer to give a pint of blood each towards the Red Cross blood bank in Washington yesterday were 20-year-old twin brothers, Pvts. Ralph C. Weary and Delos Rollin Weary, jr. of Chicago.

Former students at Cornell University, they enlisted together in the Army and were sent to Georgetown University together for training. They were No. 1 and 2 on a list of 206 trainees who donated blood on the first of four visits to the university which the mobile unit of the Red Cross Center is scheduled to make.

Mrs. Laurence H. Green, chairman of the Red Cross Center, was in charge of a staff of Gray Ladies who turned a large classroom used by the Georgetown Service Unit into a temporary hospital ward. Capt. I. Gordon, Medical Corps officer of the Red Cross Center on Louisiana ave., was in charge of the medical staff, and Lieut. Wilfred P. Posky was the Georgetown officer in charge of arrangements.

The 900 volunteers were from the 1440 trainees in the college and school of foreign service.

Tire Bar Protested

Charging holders of A gasoline ration cards are being discriminated against by the ruling which prevents the purchase of new tires the Keystone Automobile Club appealed to Rubber Director Dewey to modify his recent ruling.

The club makes its appeal in behalf of "millions of drivers in the East" who, it is pointed out, are unable to buy new tires even if they are injured by accident beyond repair.

Unfairness of the ruling is charged and a club spokesman said A card holders in other sections of the country a part of whose driving is "occupational" are eligible for tire replacements.

Pan-American Dance

Members of the younger diplomatic set from the Latin-American Republics will attend a dance and war bond sale at the Shoreham tonight. Dancing will begin at 9 and continue until midnight.

The ballroom will be decorated with the national colors of the republics and representatives from the various embassies will be present.

The dance and bond sale is intended to create interest in the proposed establishment of an air armada for the republics south of the Rio Grande. But the plan will not benefit from the bond sales.

Halley Avoided Treatment, Bocock Says

Police and hospital reports that Harry (Pop) Halley, 67, who died Friday after being hurt in a traffic accident Thursday, resisted treatment at Gallinger Hospital and did not tell doctors of pains in his chest were released yesterday by Commissioner Guy Mason. He made no comment.

Commissioner Mason instituted an inquiry into the death when it was learned Halley died of pulmonary embolism, crushed chest, and shock after he had been treated at Gallinger Hospital for nosebleed and a black eye.

Supt. Edgar A. Bocock of Gallinger Hospital said Dr. Roy Kelpser, "one of the best trained and most dependable admitting officers," saw Halley. During the course of the examination, Dr. Bocock reported Halley made no complaints about injuries but insisted "vigorously" on his right to leave the hospital after emergency treatment was given to him.

He said Dr. Kelpser urged Halley to remain under temporary observation and receive a more thorough and complete checkup than could be given in the emergency room, but he refused to do this.

Halley admitted to his own physician, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, whom he called Friday morning, that he did not tell the Gallinger doctors about pains in his chest.

According to Commissioner Mason, a doctor has no right to detain a person for treatment against his will on penalty of suit for assault. This principle has been established in several District court cases, it was learned.

Halley suffered the injuries from which he died in an automobile accident at 3928 Benning rd. ne. as a passenger in a car which ran into a parked car.

At Peabody

Playground Closing Irks D. C. Group

Prompt police action was urged by the District Recreation Board at its weekly meeting yesterday to cope with a situation at the Peabody Playground, adjoining the Peabody Public School at Fifth and C sts. nw., which has resulted in temporary closing of the play space to children.

Threats and confiscation of their playthings by a woman whose home is near the playground have terrorized the children, according to Mrs. Ruth Britt, in charge of recreation facilities for the area.

Police have been summoned on several occasions when the woman threatened and "cursed" the children through an opening in a fence, Mrs. Britt declared, but no definitive action against her has been possible. If she is not arrested, Chairman Harry Wender told the board meeting, the matter will be placed before the police Commissioner.

A request for recreation facilities in Snow's Court, at 25th and K sts. nw., submitted by the Lincoln Civic Association, was denied by the board yesterday.

Other business included a request for greater publicity on the concert series for servicemen and warworkers conducted by the War Recreation Activities Committee, and a recommendation that the Board of Education be asked for use of the Jackson School for recreational purposes from December 1 until June 30, 1944.

The building of four play shelters at a cost of $20,000, approved at last week's meeting, was reopened for discussion of possibilities of adding removable walls, to make the shelters usable in severe winter as well as summer weather.

20 Draftees In Class 1-A Win Appeals

Appeals from Class 1-A were granted to 20 District registrants out of a group of 55 asking for transfer from that status during the week of October 23, District Selective Service headquarters announced yesterday.

Of the 20 granted appeals, ten were placed in Class 2-A, four in Class 3-D and one in Class 4-E.

The appeals of 11 registrants seeking reclassification into Class 2-A were denied by the board, while three requests for 2-B classification were turned down. The board also denied 20 appeals to Class 3-D and one to Class 4-D.

Transferred to 2-A were:

Emmett L. Good, 32, manager of by-products section, Thompson's Dairy; James R. Cullipher, 35, streetcar motorman, Capital Transit Co.; Elijah E. Four placed in Class 2-B were:

Joseph Brelick, 27, chief draftsman, Army Map Service; Harold L. Anderson, 26, principal clerk, the Panama Canal; Dirk Brady, 28, U. S. Maritime Commission, and James F. Moulton, 21, physicist, Bureau of Ordnance, Navy Department.

Placed in Class 3-d were:

Hillard Dean, 32, janitor, General Realties, Inc.; Clyde Parmer, 27, laborer, Federal Works Agency; Richard E. Laughrey, 34, truck driver, National Biscuit Co.; James V. Dixon, 25, clerk, War Department, and Ernest M. Yusko, 23, clerk, War Department.

John M. Rush, 26, section chief, Census Bureau, was placed in Class 4-E as a conscientious objector.

Appeals from 1-A to 2-A were denied the following:

Eric E. Williams, 32, consultant to British Section, Anglo-American Caribbean Commission; Sam Burke, 21, production man, Blue Banner Laundry; Robert S. Friedman, 18, student, Catholic University; Henry R. Scheyit, 21, artificial limb technician, J. E. Hanger, Inc.; Milton M. Rosenfield, 26, stock manager, Refrigerator Supply Co.; James S. Kosak, 34, steamfitter, M. L. Hamberger, contractor; Oliver A. Robey, 34, truck driver, Parr Trucking Co.; Governur P. Bloxmon, 24, truck driver, Parr Trucking Co.; David W. Parker, 26, mechanic, Consolidated Terminal Corp.; Earl L. Boardman, 25, Pincastle, Va., street car operator, Capital Transit Co.; and Joseph B. McCully, 26, Prince Georges County, Md., inspector, Potomac Electric Power Co.

Three who were denied classification to 2-B were:

Lawrence P. Carter, 20, stenographer, Guy F. Atkinson Co.; Harry L. Dunkleberger, 29, principal organization analyst, Agriculture Department, and Robert J. Reardon, 26, surveyor, Concrete Ship Contractors, Inc.

Appeals to 3-D were refused the following:

Morris E. Burdette, 34, inspector of sanitation, District Refuse Department; Howell A. Tonan, 22, guard, PWA; Edward O. Thorpe, 18, messenger, American Red Cross; Harold B. Austin, 31, manager, Gulf Oil Station; Ralph L. Stewart, 32, supervisor, Administration Division, War Department; George Scarborough, 35, taxicab driver; Harold C. Perry, 32, elevator operator, Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.; William H. Drake, 32, messenger, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System; James R. Thomas, 35, assistant manager, Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.; Nicholas Chervepewick, 34, clerk, OPA; Samuel P. Wallace, 34, chauffeur; Frank W. Lieut. Howard T. Willey

Funeral services for Lieut. Howard Thatcher Willey, Marine pilot who was killed November 16 when his plane crashed in the Mojave Desert, will be held today at 1 p. m. at the Latter Day Saints' Chapel, 16th st. and Columbia rd. Burial with full military honors will be at 2:30 in Arlington Cemetery.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard H. Willey, 1628 Argonne pl. nw., he was born in Salt Lake City, Utah, but came to the District as a boy. He attended Central High and George Washington University. He enlisted in the Navy as an air cadet in June, 1942, and was commissioned in the Marine Corps last July. A brother Maj. Robert H. Willey, who was also stationed in the desert, will arrive this morning with the body.

Thomas Griffin, With State Department 33 Years, Retires

Thomas Griffin, 66, jovial snow-haired research assistant in the treaty division of the State Department, retired yesterday after 33 years of service that brought his total family record with the department to 113 years.

Griffin, a jokester who kept his sense of humor as he pored over weighty records, was given a farewell party yesterday by friends and associates at State Department offices, 1712 G st. nw. Among members of his family who attended was his sister, Mrs. Loretta Fitzgerald, an employe of the communications and records division who has been with the department 25 years.

Thomas Griffin, his father, who died in 1921, was with the State Department for 55 years and at the time of his death was chief of the supply division.

The retiring Griffin described the occasion yesterday as "the happiest day of my life except when I got married" after a letter of appreciation from Secretary of State Cordell Hull was read at the reception.

Secretary Hull wrote: "It is with sincere regret that I see you go, not only because you have at all times loyally and effectively discharged the important duties and responsibilities devolving on you but also for the reason that you have maintained the high tradition of patriotic selflessness established by your father in the department before you."

Secretary Hull commended "a total of 88 years of service by father and son with your Government" and closed with an expression of gratitude and earnest wishes for his future happiness and welfare.

A testimonial of friends and coworkers on the fine qualities of "Tom" Griffin was read. They also gave the honor guest a gold watch and other gifts. Mrs. Griffin was presented flowers.

Mrs. Dickinson's Rites to Be Today

Mrs. Annie Lewis Dickinson died Monday at her residence, Wheatland, in Loretto, Va., it was learned here last night. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. today at Wheatland.

The daughter of the late Fielding Lewis of Marmion and Mary Imogen Green of Rosedale, Georgetown, she was the widow of William C. Dickinson.

She is survived by three children, Fielding Lewis Dickinson, Forrest Dickinson and Imogen Dickinson, all of Loretto, and five grandchildren.

Mrs. Alice Frye Briggs

Paterson, N. J., Nov. 23.—Mrs. Alice Frye Briggs, daughter of the late United States Senator William P. Frye, died today. She lived with her daughter, Mrs. Garret A. Hobart, jr., daughter-in-law of the late Garret A. Hobart, twenty-fourth Vice President during the Administration of President William McKinley.

Mrs. Briggs lived in Washington and acted as hostess for her father while he was in the Senate.

Wing Commander Maxted

Funeral services for Wing Commander H. J. Maxted, a Royal Air Force Delegation officer who was killed Sunday in an automobile accident, will be held at 3 p. m. today at Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery with military honors.

Wing Commander Maxted was a communications officer and had been stationed here for two years. He had served in the Royal Air Force for 15 years.

Attending the service will be Air Commodore D. L. Blackford, representing the British Ambassador, Lord Halifax; Air Marshal Sir William Welsh, head of the Royal Air Force Delegation, and other officers of the RAF of the British Auxiliary Air Force and other British services here.

Congress Gets 60-Cent Turkey Dinner

That business of two Thanksgivings—a lively subject of debate before the war—cropped up yesterday in modified form as the House of Representatives restaurant offered a turkey dinner, complete with trimmings, for 60 cents.

In the midst of the fight over food subsidies, Congressmen could take time out for luncheon in their own subsidized eating establishment with this Thanksgiving special to whet their appetites:

Turkey and lots of dressing, succotash, beverage, choice of pumpkin pie or cake. Oh, yes, and a variety of rolls thrown in, free.

Those who ate the luncheon sent their compliments to the chef. The pie, they claimed, reached a new high in House culinary achievement.

Court Asked To Void Slash In Gas Rates

Contending that under the proposed rates it will not be able to maintain its credit, the Washington Gas Light Co. asked District Court yesterday to set aside the Public Utility Commission order reducing gas prices for the September, 1943-1944 year by approximately $135,000.

The gas company stated in its suit that the 5¾ per cent yearly net return granted it by the PUC is lower than the cost of capital and is insufficient for credit considerations. The gas company asks that it be granted at least 6¾ per cent profit.

Individual Saving Slight

The suit relates that domestic consumers will save only 1 per cent per month in gas costs and asks the PUC reduction order be held in abeyance at least until the court has time to review the case.

A controversy over last year's rate has now reached the United States Supreme Court with the Office of Price Administration asking the $200,000 rate increase be rescinded.

The gas company asks a review by the court of this year's decrease and an injunction. It contends the PUC at its hearings which ended November 5 erred in excluding and disregarding evidence and in allowing only one-half of last year's legal fees over the rate case to be considered an operating expense.

Sliding Scale Used

The rate reduction was arrived at by use of the sliding scale arrangement which is a method of periodic reconsideration of the rates charged by the company.

The company states that the rate reduction will result in a large accounting expense and if the court does not grant a temporary restraining order pending a court hearing the accounting and repayment will cause irritation to the public and impair relations of the firm with the public.

The gas company is represented by Attorneys E. Barrett Prettyman and C. Oscar Berry.

Throng Welcomes Templeton At Constitution Hall Recital

By Ray C. B. Brown

C. C. Cappel presents Alec Templeton in a piano recital on Tuesday night in Constitution Hall. Program: Prelude and Fugue in G minor (Bach), Sarabande and Minuet (Purcell), Rondo in B flat (Mozart), Sonata in C minor Op. 13 (Beethoven), Prelude in G sharp minor (Rakhmaninov), Polka (Shostakovich), Nocturne in C minor (Chopin), Pavane de la Belle au Bois Dormant, Petit Poucet, Laideronnette—Imperatrice des Pagodes (Ravel) Pines (Templeton), Arrangements and Improvisations (Templeton).

In theatrical parlance, Alec Templeton packed them into Constitution Hall last evening, even to the extent of three rows of auditors around the stage hemicycle. His recital last season was well attended, but proved to be only a preparation for the sold-out house that welcomed him on this occasion. It was a crowd that gave careful attention and cordial applause to the serious part of his program, and then relaxed into laughter and uproarious acclaim over his parodies and improvisations. It was the popular entertainer whom the assemblage had come to hear, but the least observant among the throng must have been impressed by the innate musicianship that is the foundation of his popularity.

In the recital proper, it was evident that his technique is not as careful as it was a few years ago, and the difference can be ascribed to the demands upon his time that reduce his hours of practice. Incessant practice is the price of virtuosity, and that implies a detachment from ordinary living that probably does not accord with his social temperament. He strikes one as a person who lives with a joyous intensity, with a keen appreciation of every moment, with a fervor of the imagination that compensates him for the darkness in which he moves.

If there were unusual passages noticeable in Beethoven's "Pathetique" sonata, for example, they must be attributed to two things—his strong individuality and the fact that he learns by ear and not by the printed page. The spirit of the music he conveys with an unerring insight, and that is the important thing—a thing that is sometimes missed by those who follow the text faultlessly. It was by ear, by listening to the original four-hand piano version and to the orchestral arrangement, that he learned to play so interestingly three numbers from Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite.

The informal part of the program disclosed the captivating Templeton personality and the wit that meets every challenge with a musical bon-mot. Schubert's "Moment Musical" in A flat major was made irresistibly amusing by alterations of rhythm and a coloring of harmonies borrowed from Rakhmaninov. The waltz from Chaikovski's "Evgen Onegin," under the title of "Eugene's Off Again," would have delighted the composer immoderately by the adaptation to contemporary fashion.

His improvisation on five notes selected from those shouted to him by auditors was a remarkable feat of quick thinking and muscial knowledge. When it came to improvisations on themes suggested in the same way, he had the house convulsed with the combination of "Starlight," Chopin's funeral march, Beethoven's C sharp minor sonata and "Pistol-Packing Mamma." Other waves of laughter were started by his amalgam of "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," Gounod's "Funeral March of a Marionette," Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" and "Roll Out the Barrel."

Military Mapping Way to Ease Christmas Holiday Travel

A cooperative plan to relieve Christmas holiday travel congestion is being mapped by military and transportation authorities in this area, it was learned last night.

Military authorities will limit and restrict furloughs, keep transportation heads informed of the number of furloughs to be granted, and troop movements will be held to a minimum.

Air lines and railways have canceled the thousands of annual term and trip passes issued to their employes heretofore for the holiday season.

The furlough limiting plan is to be much the same as last year's. Orders issued by commanding officers of the Coast Guard, Navy and Marine Corps require that one-day furloughs, weekend passes and two-week leaves be held to a maximum of 5 to 15 per cent of the personnel at any given post.

A similar plan is to be issued by the War Department shortly, but camps in this area reported last night that no specific instructions had been received yet.

From Baltimore the Associated Press reported that an order signed by Admiral Robert Donohue, chief Coast Guard personnel officer, asked that troop movements be limited to "those made absolutely necessary under the war effort."

Team to Be Dunigan Bearers

Requiem mass for Tommy Dunigan, Gonzaga High School student, who died as the result of injuries suffered in a football practice two weeks ago, will be said tomorrow at 10 a. m. at Blessed Sacrament Church, Chevy Chase Circle. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Teammates of the 15-year-old boy will act as pallbearers. The student body of Gonzaga and members of the faculty will attend the mass as well as many students of the Blessed Sacrament School from which he was graduated two years ago.

A requiem mass for the boy was said yesterday in St. Aloysious Church by the Rev. Francis Garner, S. J., director of Gonzaga, which was attended by the student body.

The entire student body of St. John's College prep school will attend a mass for the Dunigan youth at 8:45 a. m. today, in the school chapel, Father Thomas of St. John's announced last night.

Gonzaga alumni also are planning to attend a requiem mass on Sunday at 8:30 a. m. in the school chapel.

Tommy was taken to Providence Hospital on November 9 immediately after the accident. He died on Monday.

Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Dunigan, 4616 DeRussey Parkway, Chevy Chase; two brothers, Walter, jr., and Joseph, both of whom are in the armed forces, and a sister, Patricia.

Francis J. Hartnett

Funeral services for Francis J. Hartnett, 53, member of the staff of the Technical Information Branch, Office of the Chief of Engineers, who died Monday afternoon at his home 233 6th st. sw., will be held at 2 p. m. today at Hysongs funeral home.

A native of Washington and the son of John and Josephine Hartnett, both native Washingtonians, he attended school here and was graduated from Georgetown University. He was a reporter on the old Washington Herald and the Philadelphia Bulletin before moving to Atlantic City, where he was engaged in newspaper and public relations work. He returned to Washington during the first World War and served as secretary to Gen. Peyton March, Army chief of staff. He married the former Mary Josephine Foller on his birthday May 20, 1912.

Col. Thomas S. Clarke

Funeral services for Col. Thomas Stanley Clarke, USMC, 59, will be held at 12:30 p. m. tomorrow at Fort Meyer Chapel with burial in Arlington Cemetery. Col. Clarke died Saturday at the Philadelphia Naval Hospital after an illness of several weeks.

At the time of his death, he was officer in charge of the Eastern Recruiting Division in Philadelphia. He had been in the Marine Corps since January, 1909, when he was commissioned a second lieutenant. He was appointed a colonel in June, 1936.

Col. Clarke saw foreign service in China, Panama, Haiti and Santa Domingo. Before going to Philadelphia in May, 1939, he was chief of staff in San Diego. He had served at Quantico and Norfolk.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Marianna R. Clark, Rosemont, Pa., and his mother, Mrs. G. Ward of New York City.

OPA Studies Reduction in Meat Points

By the Associated Press

The Office of Price Administration is "seriously considering" a general reduction in the ration point cost of all types of meat.

An OPA spokesman, emphasizing that a final decision has not been made, said yesterday that meat supplies for civilians have improved in recent weeks and that the situation warrants a downward revision of point cost.

Reduction of beef values would be the first in several months. A cut in pork points was put into effect last week because of increased supplies.

Civilian supplies of fresh apples will be increased somewhat under a new order of the War Food Administration removing restrictions on the sale of certain grades.

Some time ago, the WFA ordered that all apples of the Albemarle Pippin, Newton, Winesap and York Imperial varieties which meet U. S. No. 1 or higher, standards but which measure less than 2¼ inches in diameter, be sold or used for processing or held for sale to the Government.

Yesterday's action removes these restrictions to permit such apples to move into civilian channels.

An 8 per cent increase over last year in the total take of pilchards, or California sardines, and an increase of 2 per cent in the pack of canned sardines by the end of October was reported yesterday by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

Rabbit producers and slaughterers who customarily sell rabbit meat direct to the consumer will again be permitted to charge retail prices in such transactions starting November 29, the OPA announced yesterday.

Since last February, a retail sale of rabbit meat has been defined to include only establishments which sell other food products as well. This excluded rabbit growers, who protested and were supported by the Fish and Wildlife Service of the Interior Department.

Sasscer, Beall To Attend Tour Of Housing in Md.

Two Maryland Congressmen—Representatives Sasser (Democrat) and Beall (Republican) will accompany members of a Senate District Housing Subcommittee on a tour of nearby Maryland war housing developments at 10 a. m. today.

The Senate group will include Chairman Burton (Republican) of Ohio and Senator Capper (Republican) of Kansas, who will be making their eighth trip around National Capital Housing Administration properties. NCHA Executive Officer John Ihlder will accompany the party.

The itinerary covers the Maryland projects and the 500-unit Lilly Ponds Houses, a District development at Kenilworth and Eastern aves. nw.; the Calvert Houses near Riverdale for 500 families; and the Fairway Houses at Silver Spring for 238 families. All are restricted to white warworkers.

Army Takes Over Struck Leather Plants Today

Peabody, Mass., Nov. 23 (AP).—The Government will take over operation of the 32 strike-bound leather plants in the Peabody-Salem area and the Army will move in tomorrow, James F. Dunn, business agent of the National Leather Workers Association, an independent union, asserted tonight.

He said his information was based on a telephone call received from Washington officials. He added that the union welcomed the coming of the Army and was prepared to cooperate with Government officials in reopening.

The strike, now in its third week, was called because two of its members were discharged, and involved 2000 leather workers.

Toscanini's Daughter 'Wanted' by Fascists

Bern, Nov. 23 (AP).—Il Fascio, Fascist newspaper of Milan, has demanded the arrest of Wally Toscanini, daughter of Arturo Toscanini, because she "conducted a concert at an American benefit for the United States armed forces."

The paper called Miss Toscanini "the worthy daughter of the traitor Toscanini." The noted conductor incurred the wrath of the Fascists when he refused to direct a Fascist hymn.

Wanted by Fleischmann!
Good Judges of Good Whiskey To Try a Great New Brand!
Wouldn't You Like to Serve a Whiskey that has the Full, Ripe Richness of the World's Finest, Most Limited Brands? If you would, now you can! Read why!
TASTE! BODY! AROMA! These are the three qualities of a superb whiskey—and in Fleischmann's PREFERRED you find all three! The taste is rich, delicious! The body round, and full! The aroma, delicate!
• This invitation is written for the few men who are really good judges of good whiskey . . . who can appreciate a whiskey that is as gloriously rich, creamy and delicious as the world's finest, most limited brands —and who do not need a high price to confirm them in their judgment.
We set out several years ago to see if we could make such a whiskey. We spared no expense. We experimented. We drew from the world's choicest reserves. We selected the finest grains, and backed them up with the world's most delicate skill.
The result is—Fleischmann's PREFERRED, one of the world's most remarkable whiskies. Velvety! Creamy! Full! Delicious! We are sorry that we can offer Fleischmann's PREFERRED only in limited amounts as all our distilling facilities are devoted 100% to the war effort. If your dealer has Fleischmann's PREFERRED, try it! You'll always be glad you did!
THE WORLD'S GREATEST "MANHATTAN"? We say so! Take 2 dash of Angostura Bitters, ¼ oz. sweet vermouth, and 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED! Stir with ice, strain into 4-oz. glass, add one Maraschino cherry!
FOR AN "OLD FASHIONED" that tastes like cream — to ½ level teaspoon granulated sugar, 2 or 3 dashes of bitters in an Old Fashioned glass, add just enough water to dissolve sugar. Muddle! Add ice cubes, 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED. Garnish with cherry, twisted lemon peel, or orange and pineapple!
FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED BLENDED WHISKEY
FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED Blended Whiskey. The straight whiskies in this product are 4 years or more old; 35% straight whiskies, 65% neutral spirits distilled from grain. 90 Proof.

Day Care

The Children's Bureau of the Labor Department has made an illuminating study of the need in Washington for facilities to care for the children of working mothers. According to Katherine F. Lenroot, Chief of the Bureau, "one out of every six women employed by the Federal Government in the Washington area with children under 16 wants arrangements different from those she now is able to make for the care of her children while she works." Present group facilities can accommodate only a small fraction of the youngsters who need them. The Capital is not, of course, a typical community. But the need for child care facilities experienced here must be felt in all parts of the country. In war production centers the need is undoubtedly intensified.

The inadequacy of our national child care program has had two unfortunate consequences. It has contributed to the wave of delinquency among young people whose parents, employed in war industries, are unable to give them proper surveillance. And, in this period of acute labor scarcity, it has kept many mothers from seeking war jobs. We cannot fully mobilize American women for the war effort until we provide centers where their children can be cared for in health and safety while the mothers are at work.

Basically this is a community job. It must be worked out at the local level, taking into account special local needs and preferences. But, of course, it requires Federal aid in the form of financing and supervision and an information program to make working mothers familiar with the uses and benefits of the child care centers. Just such a blending of Federal and local efforts is provided by the Thomas bill passed long ago by the Senate but still awaiting House action. The Labor Department study of conditions in Washington affords the House a clear illustration of the need for this measure. There should be no further delay in putting it into operation.

Canol Project

The Undersecretary of War has made a stanch and forthright defense of the Canol project, now under fire from Secretary Ickes. The undertaking was approved by the joint chiefs of staff. It was begun at a time when our maritime supply route to Alaska and the Aleutians was threatened by the enemy and an alternative source of oil for these outposts seemed essential. A new pool of oil, estimated to contain between 50 million and 100 million barrels, has been discovered and developed—no negligible benefit at this stage when we are concerned over our dwindling petroleum reserves. The Canol project, from a purely military point of view, appears to have been thoroughly justified.

But Mr. Ickes castigates it as a commercially unprofitable venture. There is no doubt that the cost of delivering oil to Alaska by this means is far higher than by tanker from our West Coast ports. This is simply another way of saying that war is extremely wasteful. From the vantage-point of the present, with the Japanese navy on the run in the Pacific, it may even be said that Canol was not needed. Happily, all our air-raid defense precautions have not been needed, either. This is not to say, however, that they were unwise or ought to be abandoned. In war one prepares for the worst contingencies.

Secretary Ickes, it occurs to us, ought to be the last man to condemn the Canol project on grounds of commercial expediency. It was he who foresaw the tanker shortage in 1941, well before our entry into the war, and urged the construction of a pipeline from Texas to the East Coast as an alternative means of supply. A good deal of grief and irritation could have been spared if his advice had been heeded when first offered. More recently the Petroleum Administrator for War has shown no hesitation in seeking an increase in the price of oil, regardless of the stabilization program, as a means of encouraging greater production for war needs.

Acknowledging the military necessity for the Canol project, one may still wonder at the secrecy and highhandedness with which it was undertaken. Neither the Petroleum Administrator nor the War Production Board was consulted at the outset. The Budget Bureau was given the impression that the venture would cost about 25 million dollars; it has already run up to 134 million dollars in expenses. The lamentable history of the Pentagon Building seems to have been repeated. There were, perhaps, sound reasons for secrecy as to the strategic considerations which motivated the Canol undertaking. But the pipeline itself could have been no secret from the Japanese. And the cost of its construction certainly had greater significance for American taxpayers than for enemy agents.

The press and public of this country are inclined to repose full confidence in decisions taken by the War Department and the joint chiefs of staff. But that confidence is not enhanced when decisions are taken arbitrarily and shrouded in secrecy on tenuous grounds of military necessity. Judge Patterson has made a perfectly satisfactory defense of the Canol project. The fact remains that no defense would have been needed if he had offered an earlier explanation of the War Department's purposes.

Affaire Patton

The curious thing about the episode which occurred last August in the field hospital in Sicily, and which Mr. Drew Pearson has suddenly made into a cause celebre, is that both the principals, Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., and an unnamed Regular Army private, appear to have been suffering from slightly different phases of the same disorder. It is the malady usually designated by psychiatrists nowadays as "battle neurosis." In the general's case the disorder was probably aggravated by the tensions and responsibilities of the campaign on which he was then engaged. At the sight of the soldier, whom he thought to be a conscious malingerer, but who was more probably suffering from a mild form of hysteria, the general himself became hysterical. He struck the soldier twice, calling him a "yellow belly." An Army nurse who attempted to intervene was ordered away weeping by her superior officer, a doctor. A week later, according to the fairly detailed accounts of the incident passed by military censors at Algiers, the soldier had recovered and had rejoined his unit at the front.

A report of the incident went to General Eisenhower, who, without issuing any formal reprimand and without ordering a court-martial, gave Patton what is described in the dispatches as a ferocious dressing down, ordering him to make immediate amends. Obediently Patton apologized to the soldier in front of the original witnesses. Later, it is said, the general went to all the divisions of his command, calling the officers together, and frankly confessing to them that he had conducted himself at the hospital in a manner unbecoming an American officer. It is difficult at this distance and in such a different atmosphere as this to pass judgment in such a case. It is merely a truism to observe that in the excitement of combat, and in the strain of tremendous responsibility, not even generals always behave with perfect poise and decorum. Thus, the impulse is to consider the circumstances rather than the deed itself.

At the same time, however, it should be remembered, generals owe their positions to a presumption that, even in the midst of battle, they are capable of more sober judgment and greater self-control than the men who serve under them. Again, it might be remarked that General Patton has more or less cultivated the role of tough, hard-boiled commander, whose tongue and temper, even in peacetime, have been somewhat notorious. Finally, for an officer, under any provocation and under any circumstances, to strike an enlisted man constitutes a serious breach of regulations. Justice, it would seem, requires us to ask what might have happened in the case of an enlisted soldier who, in a moment of hysteria, so far lost his head and so far forgot the Articles of War as to strike a general officer in front of witnesses. How would such an episode have been regarded in the light of discipline and morale? Is it possible that such a case would be declared closed after an apology, however magnanimous? Of course not.

Polish Question

When Messrs. Stalin, Churchill and Roosevelt meet (that they will meet is now taken for granted), one of the problems that will undoubtedly come within their ken is that of Soviet-Polish relations. This problem is not merely important to the Russian and Polish governments and to the Russian and Polish peoples. It is of concern to all the United Nations. For any difficulties that disturb the relations of any two partners of the Grand Coalition trouble the harmony that should exist among them all.

So far there has been no indication that progress in the direction of solving the Russian-Polish problem was made at the Moscow conference. The assumption is that that was one of the matters discussed but not acted on. For a variety of reasons it was probably wise to postpone the basic frontier issue involved in the dispute between the two governments. It is troublesome, however, that in the atmosphere of good will which has been generated among Russia, Great Britain and the United States, Moscow has not yet seen fit to resume diplomatic relations with the Polish government-in-exile. We thought such a gesture would be a follow-up of the Moscow parley, and said as much. Now we would make the suggestion.

The Polish government-in-exile is, in the opinion of those best qualified to know, as representative of the Polish people as any government-in-exile can be. Indeed, a very close and intimate relationship is believed to exist between that government and the highly organized underground movement in Poland. The fact that Russia continues to maintain an aloof and critical attitude toward that regime is disturbing because it suggests that Moscow is still nursing plans to impose a regime of its own on Poland after the Red army has moved across the old border. This may not be so. We can only hope that it is not so. But as long as there is a complete absence of diplomatic relations between the Russian and Polish governments, suspicions will remain.

Saving The Survivors

It is a rare occurrence in legislative history for a bill or a resolution introduced in either house of Congress to have multiple sponsorship and the backing of members of both parties. This, however, is precisely what happened in the case of the resolution introduced in the Senate on November 9 urging the creation of a commission "to save the surviving Jewish people of Europe from extinction at the hands of Nazi Germany." Bearing the name of Senator Guy Gillette of Iowa, this resolution is cosponsored by Senators Taft, Thomas of Utah, Radcliffe, Murray, Johnson of Colorado, Guffey, Ferguson, Clark of Missouri, Van Nuys, Downey and Ellender. A similar resolution has been introduced in the House by Congressman Will Rogers, jr., of California and Joseph Clark Baldwin of New York. Hearings on the resolution are now under way.

The fact that so many distinguished lawmakers are backing this resolution suggests the urgency of the move they recommend. Even though faced by the certainty of ultimate defeat, the Nazis are not abandoning their murderous practices against the conquered people. And now, as in the past, their sadistic fury is being vented with particular ferocity against the Jews. Last March the Congress by concurrent resolution strongly expressed its condemnation of this "mass murder of Jewish men, women and children." But resolutions have not and cannot stay the hands of Hitler's executioners. If any portion of Hitler's intended victims are to be saved, they must be saved now. And, as Senator Gillette has pointed out, the Allies are not altogether helpless. There are several things they can do.

They can, in the first place, make clear to the peoples of occupied Europe and to the enemy that the provisions of the recent statement on atrocities signed by President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin also apply to the Jewish people of Europe. Secondly, according to the Iowa Senator and the cosponsors of the resolution bearing his name, reservation camps under the control of such a commission as he recommends could be established in Turkey, Sweden, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal and North Africa. Already Sweden, by permitting entry of 6000 Danish Jews, has set an example which Europe's other neutrals could well be urged to imitate, although the costs of taking care of such refugees should be shared by the United Nations until such time as they can be moved to areas suitable for temporary or permanent abode.

Getting Closer

Both for what it is and for what it foreshadows the American occupation of Makin, Abemama and Tarawa islands in the Gilbert group constitutes the most promising venture we have yet made in the Central Pacific. Until now our fleet and its air arm have had to content themselves with hit-and-run raids. Some of these, like the assault on Marcus and Wake Islands, were carried out in very considerable force. They have demonstrated the enormous growth in American striking power in the two years since Pearl Harbor. Up to last week, however, there was no counterpart in the Central Pacific to the kind of operations we have successfully carried out in the South and the Southwest Pacific.

The assumption back of the Gilbert Islands move, therefore, must be that we now have sufficient strength not only to attack the enemy but to wrest territory from him in regions he has regarded as peculiarly his own, even though the islands we are now occupying were British rather than Japanese-ruled at the beginning of the war. In so doing we are peeling away still another layer of defense with which Japan has surrounded the vitals of her empire, namely the home islands themselves and such strategic centers as Truk, the great Japanese naval base in the Carolines. A thrust directly at those vitals is still difficult. But we are placing ourselves in a position where in due course it will be possible.

GREY HARBOR

Now the swaying masts and the hulls emerge
Where the fog is thinned
By the norther sweeping in from the cold sea.
Gull-grey billows shake their white-tipped plumes
Under the wind
And race for the shore in a vast silver surge.
Grey on grey the seabirds drift with the cloud
Or plunge to the foam,
On the back of the breakers, the back of the wind they ride;
And their cries that warn of the storm are plaintive and loud.
Gathering home,
They cling to the niche in the rock at the edge of the tide,
They perch on masthead and mooring and rocking skiff,
And their voices shrill, "O strong are the wings of the sea, Stronger than we.
And strong are the wings of the wind that have borne us here
Out of the anger of heaven to the sheltering cliff,
Till the stars shall break over foreland and cloudy steep,
Till the dawn blow clear,
And we spread our wings again above the deep."

Subsidy Debate

By Mark Sullivan

Covers Inflation

THE DEBATE about paying subsidies, as a means of avoiding rise in prices to consumers, was not confined to that subject. Indeed the merit or demerit of subsidies, as a present device, was rather lost in the wordage over related subjects. The debate covered all the factors that enter into price rise, or are alleged to. It was both diagnosis of the recent past, and prognosis about the future. It covered the whole field of inflation: what causes it, who or what is responsible for the possibility of it at this time, and especially the question to which everybody would like to know the answer—whether we are likely to have inflation.

On this question, if a reporter were to rid himself of every pretense to personal pontification, if he were to confine himself to canvassing the opinions of experts and others, his report could boil down to a brief answer containing three not very illuminating words—"yes and no." At best the report would be like a divided opinion of the Supreme Court—5 concurring, 4 dissenting. And the opinion of the majority concurrers might be either yes or no.

THERE ARE experts at both ends of the gamut of expectation—some asserting that inflation is unavoidable; others confident that there will be no serious inflation, or that the degree of it will be so slight as hardly to deserve the word. There are practical business men making commitments on the theory that some time within the coming three or four years, prices of goods will be extremely high. Other business men, equally practical, go on the theory that within the next few years prices of goods in general will be materially lower than at present.

In both groups, the period of anticipation, some three or four years ahead, covers two widely different conditions — the war still going on, and the war ended. The economic consequences of the coming of peace are closer than the peace itself. Actual conclusion of the war, including the war with Japan, may not be near, but some of the consequences of anticipated conclusion are already present. For one, the armed forces have reduced their estimates of the quantity of money needed. The meaning of this might be misinterpreted. It does not mean that the armed forces have one view or another about the nearness of peace. Fighting men do not indulge in such speculation. Their simple rule, maximum effort until the enemy surrenders.

But it can be put this way: At the beginning the armed forces went on the assumption that the only limit to the materials we should throw into the war was the limit that the country could produce. This was sound military strategy and sound common sense. Pursuance of this policy entailed enormous appropriations by Congress, enoromus contracts for material, enormous storing up of supplies of all kinds. With this accomplished, the armed forces are now able to streamline their appropriations and supplies closer to actual neds as developed by the course the war has taken.

THIS DOES not mean any reduction in the quantity of manpower needed for fighting and for producing supplies. If the course the war has taken has brought reduction of need for some kinds of supplies, it has brought increase of need for other kinds. What is going on, as respects manpower, is redistribution, not reduction. The more manpower devoted to war work, and the more diligently it works, the sooner will the war end.

But reduction of appropriations does mean reduction of what was formerly estimated as the probable cost of the war. This in turn means probable reduction in the total national debt at the end of the war. Inasmuch as national debt is one of the chief causes of inflation, reduction of the probable size of it is proportionate reduction of the likelihood of inflation, and of the degree of it.

End of the war, when it comes, will bring another condition working against inflation, and against high prices of goods. Whenever the war ends, the armed forces will have on hand enormous stores of goods, including food. Probably they will have as much as would be needed for another year or more of maximum fighting. Whatever is done with these supplies, will affect prices of goods. If the no longer needed supplies held by the armed forces were thrown on the civilian market, drop in prices would be a practically certain consequence. There is some possibility that much of the supplies of food, instead of being put on the market, may be devoted to feeding the populations of liberated and conquered countries.

These are but a few of the conditions which, coming into existence when the war ends, will affect the prices of goods, some one way, some another. What will be the net effect of all these conditions is confusing enough to account for the widely divergent views that now exist about the level of prices at a time a year or so following end of the war.

Fear Of Bombing

By Paul Schubert

Factor In The Future

THE DESTRUCTIVE power of bombing is now fully established. Witness the damage to the Europe that we knew. London will never be the same—the new London may be a better, fairer city, but it will be different.

Nor can London now forget the fact that London was bombed. Cologne, Genoa, Warsaw, Rotterdam . . . Hamburg, Sofia, Berlin . . . Pilsen, Wilhelmshaven, Paris . . .

Not since the introduction of gunpowder have there been such scars. The last war devastated Rheims, Liege, innumerable villages and towns near the "front." A few bombs fell on London—a long-range gun dropped shells into Paris.

But fundamentally the last war damaged men, not cities.

This war has damaged men, too. But beyond that, this war has reached into the great population concentrations which are symbolic of the life of our times, and has unleashed savage destruction upon factories, workers' dwellings, transportation centers—the component parts of "mass production."

Bombing—that's the new fear.

FROM NOW ON, people are going to feel unsafe if they are within bombing range of a "hostile" nation. Bombing range increases year by year. The new feeling of insecurity is a new factor in world relations.

The bombing of Germany is the first systematic and comprehensive effort to destroy a nation's war-making potential by explosive dropped from the air.

During 1943 a prodigious amount of explosive has been dropped on targets in Germany. Statistics now available purport to show the per cent of decrease in Germany's war production as a result of this bombing. The statistics are impressive. Presumably, like most wartime statistics, they are generalizations—the Germans know a great deal more about the facts than we do, today. The Germans, not ourselves, are now the great experts on the damage done by bombing, since they see the damage at first hand. We are merely experts on the way to drop bombs in large quantities.

The fact remains, great material damage has been done.

The further fact remains, Germany still fights on. The bombing offensive is not finished—it will have to be continued, stepped up, driven home until the great goal, victory, is achieved.

Advance estimates as to the result of bombing were for the most part over-optimistic. Apart from the belief that it would be relatively easy to demolish key factories, there was a feeling that enemy morale would crack.

FEW WOULD have believed that Germany, or any other country, would fight on after receiving the bomb-tonnage dropped during 1943—something like 180,000 tons of bombs so far this year.

How many more tons will it take to crack Germany?

Perhaps quite a lot—but it seems clear, today, that there is a cracking point. The cracking point is not easily attainable. Only a great air attack, supported by large and powerful nations, can reach the cracking point—

Yet dread of this result will be the future dread.

What's the answer?

Is the sense of security gone forever?

When the gun arrived, an answer was found by surrounding cities with walls—fortifications which grew more and more intricate and ramifying as the power of the gun increased.

The final defense to the power of the gun has never been attained, though for long periods defense has had the upper hand. We have come to accept a condition of see-saw between attack and defense on the ground—but on the whole, defense is at a point of such strength that in normal times most people rest easily in their beds without fear that they may be overfallen by the enemy before morning.

In the present stage of the bombing attack, offense is still one-sidedly superior.

True, defense did get the upper hand for a brief period during the German air blitz of the British Isles. The Germans were stopped by defending British fighters. Thereafter, for a brief time, some observers believed that aerial offensive was impotent.

But all through this year, the Germans have been powerless to prevent the destruction of their factories and towns. They have shot down Allied bombers, but the toll has been "bearable."

The offensive clearly has the upper hand.

But we can't generalize, and say that this condition will continue indefinitely. For one thing, the postwar architect is going to devote much energy to the creation of anti-bombing "walls"—that is, to the setting up of essential plants deep underground, and the creation of adequate shelters as a part of city planning. For another, defensive weapons are sure to improve.

Bombing will go on being a major factor in war—but not a one-sided factor.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

Government Advertising

I believe that I have closer relations than any other individual writer with newspapers published in communities under 10,000 population, and my understanding of the difficulties of these publications convinced me beyond a shadow of a doubt that legislation by Congress to authorize the purchase by the Government of 15 million dollars or more advertising in these papers to promote war bond sales is entirely practical.

There are more women editing and publishing these newspapers today than at any time in history. They are taking the places of their husbands who have joined the armed forces. These women work in the front office, the print shop, and scrape up enough business to keep the wheels going round.

There is less local advertising in thousands of these newspapers than I have known in the last 30 years, during which time I have actively supplied Washington news letters to papers in communities of less than 10,000 population. I have seen these papers every week and have reason to know that hundreds, perhaps thousands of them, are unable to fill as many columns of their space with news as in former years because of the prevailing loss of printers and other help. The shortage of newsprint supplies has also been to their disadvantage.

Have the editors and publishers squealed? They have not! In every State in the Union these papers have used their own space in their news and editorial columns, and advertising space, in backing up their Government and the war.

I have had many personal letters from editors explaining their difficulties, but these wonderful men and women don't complain, or cry for help. They are just going to carry on until peacetime comes again, and then reconstruct their own affairs and continue to serve the American public with the high grade of newspapers that have been built and established the hard way.

I have repeatedly expressed my belief, as a former editor and publisher of such newspapers in the Middle West, and as a veteran Washington correspondent to these editors for many years, on this subject. I wish to repeat my deep conviction that it is a rank injustice and a false accusation, to call this advertising plan a "subsidy." On the contrary, it is a good business investment that will pay the Government huge returns.

One suggestion that I wish to make is that a thorough tally and check on results and returns for this advertising be made. I am certain that the usual method of measuring the returns would show that the "small newspapers" should be used the year around for consistent advertising by the Government.

GOP "Walkout"

On Friday last there occurred in the House a scene which was a disgrace to our democratic form of government as well as an insult to the intelligence of our peoples. I refer, of course, to the "mass walkout" by GOP Congressmen when Representative Patman began to speak on the subsidy bill.

Now I hold no brief for Mr. Patman. I have my ideas about the subsidy bill but do not herein voice an opinion either for or against.

What I am interested in is our form of government and its preservation. What a shambles the GOP action of last Friday made of it. Here we have a piece of legislation which the Republican opponents thereof are apparently so dead set against that they are not even willing to listen to a proponent's viewpoint. What an un-American policy.

It matters not if Mr. Patman had been repeating the same thing over and over all week. How often has the Nation had to listen to substantially the same speeches out of Borah, Wheeler, Hiram Johnson, and a few others regarding our not participating in a world organization to keep the peace?

The issue here is not whether the proposed subsidy plan is good or bad, but that the voice of the chosen Representative of a congressional district just will not be listened to by a group of his colleagues. It is not just an insult to Mr. Patman, it is an insult to the people he represents. It is not an American way of conducting business. For the sake of decency, if nothing else, the GOP members should have listened to him.

Flushed with their recent victories at the polls I suppose the GOP feels it can pursue such a course of action. If this action on the part of the Republicans is indicative, and I think it is, of what the Nation could expect were it in full control of the House, then I say God help the minority voices throughout our beloved Nation.

Humane And Friendly

On my way home from Fort Myer on Armistice Day, where I was sworn in along with 140 other candidates, I got to thinking about the efficiency, humane and friendly attitude, cooperative spirit and real understanding on the part of every one from a private to the highest commanding officer. The staff members at this induction center were performing their assigned tedious tasks efficiently and pleasantly. I am happy to state that our democratic way of life likewise is apparent in our Army life, while a strict disciplinary condition is being observed.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Fuehrer And American Movies

Adolf Hitler, it develops, is a rabid movie fan and especially likes to get American films, for some strange reason, and have them run off for him at Berchtesgaden. When the Drottningholm, prisoner ship, was returning from Scotland, the Nazis confiscated a batch of them for the Fuehrer. They included Disney's "Bambi," Betty Grable in "Coney Island" and the films "Crash Dive" and "Cairo."

He had better be careful how far he goes. If he goes in for our double-features he will get that breakdown, after all.

Of course it is just possible that Hitler doesn't really like American films. He may merely take them to Berchtesgaden so he can spend an evening booing.

Still, Adolf is the type who would be a movie fanatic. He likes darkness, bad air, blatant credit lines, Donald Duck, Popeye, the Dracula sort of thing and a chance to argue with ushers.

Scene in the Chancellery

Adolf (to Goering)—Well, did we seize any American films this week?

Goering—Fuehrer, our forces to the north won another tremendous victory. They seized "I Dood It," "Lassie Comes Home" and "The Gang's All Here." On the west, we took "Buffalo Bill," "Looney Toons" and "Wintertime."

Adolf (shuddering)—Ach, give 'em back that last one! It gives me the creeps. Any word from Rommel?

Goering—He almost got "Always a Bridesmaid" and "For Whom the Bell Tolls" but had to retreat at the last moment.

Adolf—How is Kesserling doing?

Goering—I have a wire from him that he has brought up reserves and is within 10 miles of a new Carmen Miranda vehicle.

Adolf—Anything new on the Russian front?

Goering—The situation there is pretty clouded.

Adolf—I remember when everything on that front was in technicolor.

Goering—There are reports that in the Minsk sector we are threatening "Mission From Moscow" and "North Star."

Adolf (fiercely)—They don't even exist any more. The Warner Brothers have been exterminated, not to rise again for a thousand years.

Goering—Here's a message from our U-boats.

Adolf—Yes, yes, what is it?

Goering—They have torpedoed "Yankee Doodle," "Victory Through Air Power" and "Salute to the Marines."

Adolf (victoriously)—Good. There are some American movies I will never allow in the house. And by the way, has that marshal been executed yet?

Goering—Which one?

Adolf—The one that sent me "With Eisenhower in Africa"?

Skillful And Courteous

Will you allow me to express through your columns my deepest thanks to the Police and Fire Departments of Arlington County for saving the lives of my wife and myself early last Thursday morning? We were overcome by gas from an explosion in our coal furnace and were in complete collapse. My wife's aunt called for help, and both the Police and Fire Departments responded immediately. With the help of the resuscitator and oxygen they brought us through. No police and fire departments could have acted more swiftly, nor could their men have been more thoughtful, skillful or courteous. It was a striking example of the kind of service that is at the disposal of the people of Arlington County when they need it. And all this in face of the fact that the war has depleted their ranks to an extent undreamed of by the average citizen. But they carry on without complaint, and when you need them they are there. They have certainly proved that to us, and we are grateful to them far beyond anything we can ever say or write.

Allied Problem

By Ernest Lindley

Terms Of Peace For Germany

BEFORE THE Moscow Conference, its was widely asserted that the most important single practical problem facing the three major Allies was the treatment to be accorded Germany. To what extent the foreign ministers discussed this matter and where they left it has not been disclosed. Secretary Hull aimed at longer-ranging and more fundamental objectives.

LINDLEY

The Allies agreed to work as partners in concluding the war and organizing the peace. They agreed on certain detailed matters and created machinery for further collaboration. They renewed their pledges to fight together until Germany surrenders unconditionally.

Obviously the three major Allies in the war against Germany need a firm understanding as to the terms of the peace they will impose. It may be useful to publish them at the earliest possible moment. That would not necessarily be inconsistent with unconditional surender. Unconditional surrender rules out a compromise peace; it shuts out haggling over terms. It means that Germany must openly acknowledge complete defeat and throw herself on the mercy of the victors. It does not prevent the prospective victors from indicating the general nature of the terms they will impose.

The Allies have agreed that the German war criminals, including not only the top leaders but lesser perpetrators of individual outrages, will be punished. They will be turned over to the judgment of the peoples on whom their outrages were inflicted—excepting those guilty of offenses in more than one area, who will be tried and punished jointly by the Allies.

The President and Prime Minister Churchill publicly have declared that Germany must be totally disarmed, and the Russians apparently agree. But there has been little or no public discussion by high Allied officials of the geographical and economic terms to be imposed.

There has been talk in British circles and among some of the smaller United Nations, and to some extent in Washington, of splitting the Reich into two or three, or even a larger number, of separate states. This is on the theory that Germany as a unit is inherently too big and too strong to be kept under control permanently. Others doubt that the partition of Germany would stick, especially after the withdrawal of the Allied forces of occupation.

According to one view, Germany cannot be kept disarmed and impotent except by destroying and moving out her heavy industries, and preventing her from replacing them. According to another, this would be a most uneconomic solution, injurious to Europe as a whole as well as to the German people, who must have some way of earning a living. An alternative plan, originating among some of the smaller nations but commanding favorable attention in London and Washington, is to place the large German industries—especially those potentially useful in war—under permanent international control.

If other European nations were represented on the directorates of these industries, and the plants were subject to frequent inspection by an appropriate international agency, there would be no serious danger, it is argued, of Germany's secretly rearming herself. If violations were found and not promptly corrected, Allied forces could be moved in promptly by air. Such a scheme, it is held, would obviate the need for a long-time military occupation of Germany.

The name of Lord Vansittart, former British Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, has become associated popularly with stern treatment for Germany. Actually, the heart of Vansittart's formula is, in his own words: "Full larder, empty arsenals." This is not severe. An opportunity to earn a decent living is about as much as Germany can hope for. It is probably more than many Germans, under the influence of Nazi propaganda, expect to get.

Any economic and political terms on which the three major Allies are likely to agree probably would be more attractive to the Germans than what the Nazi leadership has led them to expect in case of defeat. By now most Germans must know that they are doomed to defeat, and that the longer they fight the fewer factories and the fewer habitable dwellings they will have left.

The air assault on Germany is being stepped up. The forces are being massed for the grand invasion of the continent next spring, if not earlier. The time would appear to be about ripe for a three-power declaration to the German people, to test their capacity to throw overboard their present leadership and accept the inevitable. This, it is confidently believed in official circles, is one of the first problems which will be explored at the long anticipated gathering of the three great Allied leaders.

The Gallup Poll

Strict Control Rather Than End of Germany Is Advocated by Most U. S. Voters in Survey

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 23.—The new Nazis' propaganda line is designed to convince the German people that defeat means utter and complete annihilation; that the war has now become a desperate struggle for survival of the German nation.

Yet if the average German could talk with typical Americans and learn their true personal opinions he would get a different impression, a nation-wide survey by the American Institute shows.

Recent utterances by leaders of the United Nations, arising from such policy-making meetings as the Moscow conference, make clear the intention to punish perpetrators of Nazi crimes and cruelties on the Continent, but leave as yet undefined the policy to be adopted toward the German nation as a whole.

Annihilation Disfavored

If past experience is any precedent, such a policy will be influenced greatly by public opinion within the United Nations. To gauge what the state of opinion in this country is at the moment, the American Institute put this question to a carefully balanced cross-section of the voting population:

"What do you think we should do with Germany, as a country, after the war?"

Replies received to this open question, when grouped and analyzed, provide little ammunition for the Nazis propagandists in their campaign to convince Germans that the democracies are out to annihilate them. Instead, this survey shows that the greatest number of Americans stress merely supervision and disarmament of Germany, rather than her destruction as a nation, as advocated by many students of international affairs, including Robert Vansittart, whose recent book, "Lessons of My Life," urges destruction of the German nation.

Analysis of replies to the question put to the people of the United States shows that they fall into four main classifications.

Largest group gave answers indicating a desire to keep Germany under strict supervision or control, but did not directly advocate destroying her completely. Most common in this group were those who favored an international police force; disarming Germany completely; changing her form of government, or restrictive steps. This group represents 43 per cent of those interviewed.

Another 21 per cent represented views of those who agreed with the theory that Germany as a nation is incurably warlike, and that, therefore, Germany must be completely and permanently destroyed. Largest number of these advocate dividing Germany into small states.

Rehabilitation Favored

Then there were those people who stressed the rehabilitation of Germany. In this group were placed those answers which suggest re-educating the Germans against war; helping her rehabilitate herself; trading with her, and so forth. These answers, like those in the first group, wanted the German nation supervised to prevent her once again plunging the world into war, but stressed rehabilitation to a greater degree that did the first group. This classification accounted for 19 per cent of the answers received.

A few (four per cent of those interviewed) advocated a "do nothing" policy and gave such replies as "leave her alone," "don't do anything to her," etc.

In tabular form, replies received to this open question, therefore, would look like this:

Strict supervision	49%
Destroy completely	21%
Rehabilitate	19%
Do nothing	4%
No opinion	14%

Because of the fact that some people gave more than one answer to the question, the figures add to more than 100 per cent.

War Department Not in Control Of Penicillin

In answer to many requests for penicillin, the new drug which prevents the growth of infection bacteria, Surgeon General Normal T. Kirk of the Army Medical Department yesterday said that the War Department "at no time has either controlled penicillin or received the entire output."

Quantities of the drug allocated to the Army Medical Department, said Kirk, are intended for treatment of military personnel and none of it can be released to civilians. Penicillin is limited and its distribution is controlled by WPB, he said.

The amount allocated to civilians is for clinical research, Kirk said, and its assignment is handled by a committee headed by Dr. Chester S. Keefer of Evans Memorial Hospital, Boston. Since the demand for the drug is greater than the supply, requests must be made through physicians, who are directed to communicate with Dr. Keefer by telephone, telegram or personal letter.

Sellers of Cars To Be Required to Return Coupons

A plan to establish more effective control over return of unused gasoline coupons when ownership of an automobile is transferred, will be put into effect January 1, the Office of Price Administration announced yesterday. Earlier, OPA had said the plan would be effective December 1.

The plan calls for return of ration books before an automobile is transferred. Local ration boards will issue a receipt in duplicate for the coupons, with the original copy going to the State Motor Vehicle Department with the new owner's application for registration. The other copy will be used by the car purchaser in applying for gasoline rations.

Dealers and others holding new or used cars for resale will be required to file an inventory of their stocks as of December 31 and obtain a receipt for each vehicle.

Hitchcock to Join Flight Combat Unit

London, Nov. 23 (AP).—Lieut. Col. Tommy Hitchcock, the polo star who was an aviation ace of the first world war, has left his post as assistant military attache for air at the American Embassy and returned to the United States where he will join an air-force outfit preparatory to overseas combat duty. He had been assigned to the embassy staff since May, 1942.

In the first world war he served with the French Lafayette Escadrille and was captured by the Germans, but escaped.

— Philip Hamburger, N. Y. Times Book Review

"An unusual book in the full sense of the word . . . decidedly a new kind of war book; it needs to be read on all accounts, for it is vivid and thoughtful, and reveals yet another side of the tremendous enterprise in which we are engaged."
— Lincoln Colcord, N. Y. Herald Tribune

"A peculiarly realistic reconstruction of the emotions of a great experience . . . which mounts with excitement."— Henry Seidel Canby, Book-of-the-Month Club News

TO ALL HANDS

By Lt. John Mason Brown
U. S. N. R.

A blow-by-blow account of the U. S. Atlantic Amphibious Forces in action as announced from the bridge of a flagship to the men below deck. Foreword by Rear Admiral Alan G. Kirk, U.S.N. 88 Illus. $2.75

WHITTLESEY HOUSE

IS THIS HIS REWARD?

Hail the conquering hero . . . But don't forget him!

When the shouting and the tumult dies . . . when his bonus is spent and his sacrifices are forgotten . . . what then?

Will he be back in useful civilian life . . . or, with no money, no job and discouraged, will he be a grim reminder of the trust that we betrayed?

Let's learn a lesson from World War I!

This time, let's have no more "Soldier Boy" apple vendors . . . no more veterans' bread lines . . . no more bonus armies. Let's not abandon the seriously maimed or mentally ill to live out hopeless lives as public or private charges.

No man or woman who has risked death or sacrificed health to fight for this country should be denied the best we can offer in medical treatment, rehabilitation and the right to earn a decent livelihood!

AMERICA FACES A CHALLENGE!

Already the wounded are coming back from the battlefields in growing numbers. They're a brave lot who have paid with broken bodies and shattered nerves for the democracy we enjoy and the victory we must win. Thanks to the miracles of modern medicine, far more of the casualties will be saved to live than in the last war — but many more of the living will come home crippled.

Their rehabilitation is our paramount obligation—not in the dreamy future, but now—today. How can this be accomplished? (1) Unify existing veterans' laws; (2) Simplify procedure for prompt attention and proper care for all cases; (3) Provide adequate rehabilitation facilities and centralized direction through comprehensive legislation so that no serviceman is neglected.

The power to act lies in Washington. It is up to you and your neighbors to create in your community a demand for action.

WHAT THEY SAY . . .

"We must, this time, have plans ready for the return to civilian life of our gallant men and women in the armed services—instead of waiting to do a hasty, inefficient and ill considered job at the last moment."

President Franklin D. Roosevelt, July 28, 1943

". . . a matter which I think deserves the greatest attention in order that our injured boys may receive the consideration that they so justly deserve. . . . Disabilities, no matter how honorably gained, remain present, but the cause is soon forgotten."

Hon. Charles S. Dewey, United States Representative From Illinois

"Proper care and rehabilitation of our war casualties is a sacred obligation of the nation. Thanks to efforts like these we may hope that never again, with respect to such casualties, will it be said that this democracy is lacking in gratitude."

Leo T. Crowley, Director, Office Economic Warfare

Cost of Living Jumps .4 of 1% In Large Cities

By Walter Wood

Cost of living in the Nation's big cities rose four-tenths of 1 per cent between September 15 and October 15, Secretary of Labor Perkins reported yesterday and said that in the Capital the increase was six-tenths of 1 per cent.

In making public the findings of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Secretary Perkins said the advance in cost was due mainly to increases in the price of eggs, clothing and miscellaneous goods and services.

The District, listed among six cities with the highest living costs, showed increases of 1.2 per cent in food, 0.1 per cent in clothing, and 0.3 per cent in miscellaneous items. All cost-of-living items here averaged an increase of 0.6 per cent.

Lower Egg Prices

Food prices throughout the country climbed six-tenths of 1 per cent over the month, it was said, because of a 7 per cent seasonal rise for eggs. Office of Price Administration regulations, however, provide lower egg prices from November, with continuing decreases until early in March.

The report shows that retail prices have risen nationally since August 15 by slightly less than 1 per cent, as compared with a drop of 1.4 per cent from the middle of May to mid-August.

America's cost of living index is now 5.6 per cent higher than on September 15, 1942, the stabilization level. This brings living costs 23.4 per cent above the level of January, 1941, the base date of the Little Steel formula.

Meat, Fish Price Rise

Meats and fish prices rose one-half of 1 per cent, while beef edged up slightly. Increased marketing of hogs, it was said, brought prices of pork cuts, except salt pork, down sdlightly. A fractional decline in roasting chickens was reported.

In 21 of 56 cities included in the index, prices of potatoes rose slightly, reversing the usual seasonal trend. Cabbage, onions spinach and sweet potatoes showed large decreases.

Carrots rose more than usual at this time of year, the report stated. Fresh apples declined. The supply of oranges was smaller, but prices remained unchanged, the report said.

Almost all types of clothing which are priced for the labor index were higher. Higher retail prices for some clothing, allowed by OPA, are reflected in the higher clothing costs for October, the report said.

Prices in Washington, the report showed, have climbed 5.5 per cent in the last year, it was reported, 26 per cent since August, 1939, and 24.3 per cent since January, 1941.

Steagall Rites Conducted by HouseChaplain

Funeral services were held here yesterday for Representative Henry B. Steagall, 70 (Democrat) of Alabama, who died Monday of a heart attack as arrangements were made for the funerals today of Senator W. Warren Barbour (Republican) of New Jersey, who also died on Monday, and Representative P. J. William Ditter (Republican) of Pennsylvania, who was killed in a plane crash on Sunday.

Preliminary to the burial services for Representative Steagall, which are to be held in Ozark, Ala., Thursday, services for the dead lawmaker were conducted here yesterday by the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, House chaplain.

Speaker Sam Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas, yesterday named a ten-man House committee to attend the services in Alabama.

Funeral services for Senator Barbour will be held today at Paterson, N. J. The Senate adjourned yesterday in honor of its dead member and a committee was named to attend the funeral, after his colleagues had pronounced eulogies of his work and character, on the floor of the Senate.

Speaker Rayburn also appointed a committee to attend the funeral of Representative Ditter in Ambler, Pa., today. In addition, a resolution of regret on his death was adopted by the Senate and a committee to attend his funeral was appointed from the upper house.

Press Dances Pay Cost of Victory Award of Tours

Proceeds from their weekly dances at the National Press Club are paying the all-expense tour of New York City by ten Washington girls, members of the United Nations Victory Girls, Inc., the Associated Press reported last night. The club is incorporated here as a nonprofit organization, according to the AP.

The ten were selected from among 300 members for what was described as "meritorious war work" during the past year in bond sales and canteen and Red Cross work. Their New York expenses are being borne by the club, a spokesman is reported to have said, though the girls paid their own fares from Washington.

The group includes six Government employes, a beautician, two high school students and a newspaper reporter. Mothers of two of the girls accompanied them as chaperones, it was reported.

Society for Crippled Children Will Meet

The first meeting of the District of Columbia Society for Crippled Children will be held in Room A of the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, 1615 H st. nw., at 8 p. m. Tuesday, November 30.

Dr. A. L. Van Horn, assistant director for crippled children of the Children's Bureau, and Col. E. W. Palmer, president of the National Society for Crippled Children, will speak. The meeting will be open to the public.

British Admit Loss of Samos, 3d Aegean Isle to Fall

London, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Yugoslav Partisans still clung tonight to three islands off Fiume, most vital of Hitler's Yugoslavian ports.

This was the center of the fighting on the Balkan front during a day that brought British acknowledgement that Samos, the third important island lost to the Germans in the Aegean, had been abandoned.

The British announcement said Samos was evacuated by troops who had "accomplished their task" and declared all British and Greek soldiers in the garrison and some Italian troops had been removed without loss.

While the British command implied Samos was only a diversionary assignment, criticism of the action had not ended here and today in Parliament Maj. Clement R. Attlee, Deputy Prime Minister, promised an early statement on the situation in the Dodecanese.

D. C. Throngs to Pray For Great Blessings

A citizenry that counts its ration points will count its manifold blessings at scores of Thanksgiving religious services tonight and tomorrow in the Washington area.

The second wartime Thanksgiving will find many services arranged tonight to accommodate the throngs of warworkes who will be on the job during services tomorrow.

McKean Survivors Repeated Prayer Awaiting Rescue

With United States Troops, Bougainville, Nov. 17 (Delayed) (AP).—Survivors of the McKean, United States destroyer transport, told today of the long, long minutes that followed the fatal hit by a Japanese aerial torpedo.

"We swam away from the ship as hard as we could, then a bunch of us gathered in the water and said the Lord's Prayer together," said Marine Pfc. Jesse A. Tarvin, Paron Park, Ark.

The McKean was announced as sunk November 15 while she was en route to Empress Augusta Bay, Bougainville. Tarvin said about 220 men were saved.

Tarvin said they were in the water two hours before the destroyers picked them up.

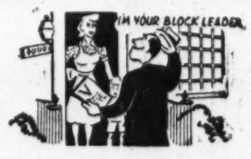
BLOCK LEADERS NEEDED!
Under the Civilian War Services Division of the District of Columbia, various home front services conducted for wartime Washington are coordinated. These services for civilians embrace such activities as Child Care and Protection — Housing — Nutrition — Transportation — War Hospitality and Recreation — Victory Gardens — and others as future needs dictate.



The District Commissioners and leading citizens believe these Civilian War Services will grow more essential in the months ahead, as the full pinch of war strikes home. Keystone of the entire program is the assistance which the public can render through participation in the Block Organization of Block Leaders.

More than 10-thousand Block Leaders are needed to act as neighborhood counselors during the vital war months ahead — to serve as good neighbors in their own neighborhood. The drive is now on for Block Leaders. The need is great. Won't you volunteer at once? Full information may be obtained by telephoning EXecutive 5440. Phone now, while you have it in mind.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Back in August, Bucky Harris after being fired as manager of the Phillies, nominated Owner William Cox as "the All-American Jerk." Yesterday, Judge Landis seconded the nomination. He kicked Cox out of baseball, end over end and right between the posts.

POVICH

Landis looks like an eagle, if you've ever noticed. The old bird bristles and strikes swiftly when he's aroused. The one thing that ruffles him above all others is betting on baseball. He won't stand for it. He says Cox, the owner of the Phillies, made bets on the team. So he gave Cox the heave-ho from baseball, forevermore.

That happened yesterday, despite the fact that Cox told Landis last week that he had resigned as president of the Phillies. Whereupon the Judge refused to be beaten to the punch and said, in effect, "you're fired anyway." Landis, the old jurist, was insisting on his contract-given right to chuck an offending club owner out of the game. No resignation was going to stop him.

And in Washington, Bucky Harris said "no comment" when he heard of Landis' action. But he seemed completely unsurprised and the grin that played about his features made his the most eloquent "no comment" ever uttered.

After a year as president of the Phillies, Cox suddenly lost interest in baseball coincident with the investigation of reports he had been betting and refused to attend a hearing to which Landis had called him. He informed Landis that he had resigned as president of the club and had "decided to devote all my time to my lumber business, essential to the war effort." Holy Smoke, didn't Landis know that there's a war going on?

Harris didn't blow the whistle on Cox. Landis heard reports of betting by the Phillies' club owner, in mid-summer. A New York newspaperman, loitering in a friendly West Side tavern, overheard one of Cox's friends confide to a bartender: "Well, I cashed a nice bet on the Phillies today.'" Inquiry developed that the fellow had been betting regularly. Landis was given the information. He developed his own investigation from that point. Yesterday's action was the result.

As for Cox, who at 34 was the baby club owner of the major leagues, he messed it up generally. At first his success was spectacular. Under Harris his team was up in the first division and packing in the customers in such numbers that by July 4 the Phils had exceeded their 1942 home attendance. Cox began to get expansive. He began to think in terms of pennant. Harris cautioned him that the Phils were lucky even to be in the first division. When the team slumped, he fired Harris, who learned from newspapermen that he had been fired.

According to Landis, Cox at first denied allegations that he had been betting on baseball as "ridiculous." Then, Landis said, he admitted at a hearing in New York on November 3, and later at Chicago that he had placed through a bookmaker "approximately 15 to 20" bets of from $25 to $100 per game on the Phillies to win.

Landis' statement declared Cox told him he had discontinued wagering about May 20 when he learned of the rule prohibiting such betting by persons having connections with the sport. Cox, it seems, was a long time catching up with that rule which the big leagues had announced back in 1927.

If, as Landis says, Cox admitted making the bets, he was a dead duck from that moment as far as any continued affiliation with baseball is concerned. The Judge wasn't content to permit Cox to resign. Regretful as he might be that there was betting on baseball, Landis decided the greater evil would be to hush it up.

When Landis took the job as baseball commissioner in 1920, the game was being plagued by a betting scandal that threatened to explode it. The White Sox of 1919 had just thrown the World Series in cahoots with professional gamblers, and baseball turned to Landis to set its house in order. Gambling on baseball and stamping it out became Landis' fetish.

Landis restored public confidence in baseball during those uncertain years, aided by the happy coincidence of Babe Ruth's home runs that captured public imagination. But he never relaxed his vigilance. He is worth all of the $50,000 the club owners pay him to boss the game.

Legally, Landis may have no right to boot Cox out of baseball, but that doesn't stop the Judge. Under his contract with the club owners, Landis can fire anybody out of the game if he thinks their conduct is prejudicial to the best interests of baseball and he is the sole judge of that, but that agreement is merely between Landis and the club owners. You still can't sign away your legal rights to go to court. That doesn't disturb Landis though, if he thinks a guy is messing up the game he has vowed to protect. He's a tough old bird.

At Least Even Chance

Army Coach Is Confident Navy Guns Will Be Spiked

By Whitney Martin

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 23 (AP).—There is nothing of the defeatist attitude around this rock-ribbed reservation on the Hudson as the day for the annual reckoning with the Navy football team nears. Come next Saturday in cozy Michie Stadium the Cadets expect to give the invading Middies a busy afternoon, with an Army victory at least an even gamble.

Even Lieut. Col. Earl (Red) Blaik, not given to overenthuiastic statements, ventures bravely:

"Nobody else seems to think so, but I think that on a dry field we have an even chance."

That, from a football coach, is equivalent to a "We'll moider 'em" statement from a fighter or baseball manager, and the handsome colonel makes it in the same breath in which he outlines the superiority of the Navy eleven in practically all departments.

Navy More Experienced

"They have more depth, more experience and more speed," he says frankly, and to show he knows what he's talking about he goes into detailed life history of the Navy backs. He knows, for instance, that Hal Hamberg was an outstanding star at Arkansas, and that Bob Jenkins starred with Alabama in the Orange Bowl, and he knows just how fast each man can cover 100 yards.

But still he concedes nothing, except in event of a heavy field, which would enable the Middies to use their superior power to best adantage. What he fears even more than Navy are the mistakes his own team might make.

"If we can keep from being our own worst enemy we'll be quite a ball team," he says and there is nothing of the boast in the remark. "We should be at the peak Saturday, even more so than for the Notre Dame game.

"And," he adds challengingly, "nobody has stopped us yet.

"Notre Dame didn't take the ball away from us," he grinned wryly. "Only literally, that is."

Anxious About Reserves

He cannot hide some concern over the reserve situation, however, and he anxiously was awaiting a report today on the condition of Bob Woods, reserve guard, and Bob Pieree, reserve back, both of whom have been hospitalized for about a week with infections.

All in all, Colonel Blaik cannot hide a certain pride in his team, which he says had developed somewhat better than he expected at the start of the season.

"If we hadn't been harassed by injuries and pressure of scholastic work we'd have a whale of a team," he says. "As it is, we've done all right in every game, barring our own mistakes."

Enthusiasm toward the game is only simmering right now at the Point, with the Cadets too busy learning to be officers to find much time for anything else. Col. Lawrence (Biff) Jones, graduate manager, says he expects a crowd of about 16,000 at the game.

Snow blanketed the practice field on the Plains today, forcing the Cadets indoors for some hard contact work. The first two backfields stressed ball handling and new formations to be used against the Midshipmen. Tom Lombardo, Glenn Davis, George Maxon and Carl Anderson worked in the first backfield, with Dale Hall, Bud Troxell, Max Minor and Bob Chabot in the second.

52 Middies Leave Friday for Point

Annapolis, Nov. 23 (AP).—Fifty-two members of Navy's 1943 gridiron machine are scheduled today to leave Annapolis Friday morning to invade West Point for the forty-fourth annual service clash with Army on Saturday.

Of the 43 games played between the two service schools since 1890, Navy has won 18 and the Cadets have been victorious in 22 clashes. Three of the games ended in ties.

And with the sights set on blasting Army and thereby raising the number to 19, Capt. John E. Whelchel, the Tars' head coach, has spared no trouble—for himself, his assistant coaches, or the middies—in polishing every play as near perfection as possible.

The 52 squad members, which include 9 ends, 9 guards, 11 tackles, 6 centers and 17 backs, who are slated to make the trip, include:

Ends—Anania, Hansen, Lelande, Channell, Johnston, Guy, Bramlett, Giorgis and Strong.

Guards—Shepard, Brown, Flanagan, Radick, Gillchrist, Chase, Lord, Dale and Gossett.

Tackles—Dietzen, Gillooly, Coppedge, Sprinkle, Brightman, Sevier, Schwartz, Gilliam, Whitmire, Staubitz and White.

Centers—Stephenson, Baker, Wilhelm, J. Martin, Barnes and DeGanahl.

Backs—Crawley, Hamberg, Barron, Pearce, Dwyer, Lawrence, B. Martin, Sullivan, Duden, Gay, Finos, Johnson, Pettit, Walton, Jenkins, Hume and Nelson.

Bob Seymour Is Praised by Redskin Mates

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A Redskin player whose great work against the Chicago Bears Sunday went overlooked in the rush to heap accolades upon the star subs and the injured players who came through received just dues last night from his teammates as the squad reviewed pictures of the Sunday surprise. The player was Bob Seymour.

During the first showing of the films in the visiting team's dressing room in Griffith Stadium, which guests, club officials and newspapermen attended, the Redskins paid constant tribute to Seymour's versatile play.

Throughout the film in which the players supply their own comment before Bergman gets down to business it was "Nice going, Bob. Nice run, Bob. Nice block, Bob. Nice tackle, Bob. That's the way to hit 'em, Bob," etc.

Seymour Stands Out

Other players came in for their share of praise by the Redskins, who in view of the happenings constituted an appreciative audience, but it was Seymour who was singled out more than any other member for his performance.

The pictures proved Seymour's longest run, a 12-yard rush through the entire Bear team, was the offensive feature of the day. "That guy has been playing good ball all season," one of the Redskins said after the practice, "lots better than he has been getting credit for, but we appreciated it."

Seymour started playing inspired ball the week he was mentioned in a trade for Bud Steele of the Phil-Pitt Steagles, a deal which fell through in Philadelphia the night the Phil-Pitts met the Chicago Bears in an exhibition. Steele, who scored one of the touchdowns in the tie game with the Redskins last month, had an off night and Dutch Bergman said no. Seymour didn't want to leave the Redskins and he really went to work after that game.

Win or lose, a game with the Bears takes a lot out of the squad and Bergman excused the players yesterday after a snappy 30-minute workout on the field. Following the pictures Maryland Coach Dr. Clarence Spears gave his scout report on the Steagles' 35-34 victory over the Detroit Lions on Sunday.

Sammy Baugh participated in the passing drill but was a spectator as George Cafego and Leo Stasica took over the kicking. Baugh will probably be available for only spot performances against the Steagles Sunday, as he was against the Bears when he played less than five minutes.

Willie Wilkin and Dick Farman were not on hand and Bob Masterson, who was roughed up several times in the Bear game, spent his time on the trainer's bench. Steve Sliwinski, who took an awful pounding in playing excellent ball against the Bears, was an absentee but will return today when Bergman starts correcting mistakes of the first Phil-Pitt game.

Landis, a Crack-Down Czar, Ruling Game Firmly Since '21

Chicago, Nov. 23 (AP).—Kenesaw Mountain Landis, since accepting the post as commissioner of organized baseball in 1921, has ruled the game with a firm hand to safeguard it from criticism and gambling.

Here are the major gambling cases on which he has ruled:

The Chicago White Sox scandal which broke in 1920 and which threatened the existence of baseball and brought about the selection of Landis, then a Federal jurist, as commissioner. The late Ban Johnson, president of the American League, brought charges against seven members of the White Sox, asserting they had participated in a gambling coup in the 1919 world series between Cincinnati and the White Sox.

Phil Douglas Banished

As a result, the light were barred from baseball. They were First Baseman Arnold (Chick) Gandil, Shortstop "Swede" Risberg, Third Baseman "Buck" Weaver, Outfielders "Happy" Felsch and Joe Jackson and Pitchers Eddie Cicotte, Claud Williams and Fred McMullin, substitute infielder.

Then there was the case of Pitcher (Shuffling) Phil Douglas of the New York Giants, who was banished by Landis in 1922 on charges that he wrote a letter offering to "throw down" the Giants. Douglas admitted he was angry at Manager John McGraw and was determined to seek revenge.

In 1924 the case of Jimmy O'Connell and Coach "Cozy" Dolan, two other members of the Giants, broke on the baseball world. Both were barred by Landis on grounds that they had offered player Heinie Sands of the Philadelphia Phillies $500 to throw a game to the Giants, a game on which the 1924 league championship had depended.

Investigated Cobb, Speaker

After the end of the 1926 season, trouble developed again. Hubert Leonard, a retired American League pitcher, charged that Ty Cobb, manager of the Detroit Tigers; Tris Speaker, manager of the Cleveland Indians, and Joe Wood, former Boston pitcher and Cleveland outfielder, had wagered on games during the 1919 season. Landis made a thorough investigation and, at the finish, they were exonerated. Cobb and Speaker, however, resigned from their managerial posts, both going to the Philadelphia Athletics. Speaker later went to Washington.

Terp Eleven Leaves Today

Confident of a better than even chance of victory, the University of Maryland football team wound up its home work yesterday in preparation for the Thanksgiving Day clash with Virginia Military Institute at Roanoke.

Dr. Clarence W. Spears, Old Liner coach, stressed pass defensive and offensive play, then had his squad brush up on signals.

Approximately 30 Old Liners left College Park early this morning for Roanoke and Spears hopes to have a light workout at the game site late this afternoon.

Wtih the return of Center Ed Hurson, who was injured in the West Virginia game, the Maryland squad is in top shape for its final game of the season Thursday.

VMI Lacks Reserves

Lexington, Va., Nov. 23 (AP).—With backfield reserves badly depleted by injury and sickness, the VMI coaches have converted Bill Glass, 140-pounder from Oklahoma City, from blocking back into a pint-sized fullback for the Maryland game at Roanoke on Thanksgiving Day.

Primo 'Indisposed' But Not Captured; Partisans Amused

On the Swiss-Italian Frontier, Nov. 23 (AP).—A report published abroad that Primo Carnera was captured by the Germans in Partisan warfare and was facing a firing squad caused a hoot of laughter at this frontier post, where it was learned that the former heavyweight champion's vaudeville show had postponed a visit to Como because of his "indisposition."

Primo, who gave up boxing for wrestling and then did bit parts in Italian films and more recently has organized his own vaudeville company, was scheduled to play at Como beginning yesterday.

The newspaper Provincia di Como announced November 18 that the opening had been postponed because the show had been prevented leaving Cremona by the champion's indisposition, the nature of which was not mentioned.

Grid Lions Draw Record 280,791

Detroit, Nov. 23 (AP).—Owner Fred L. Mandel, jr., of the Detroit Lions said today his National Football League club had played to a record 280,791 fans in 10 games at home and away this season. The Lions finished their schedule Sunday.

He said the previous club mark was 254,653 for 11 games in 1939.

Magoffin Raps Interhigh Title Play-Off Game

Paul Magoffin, District public schools head referee, last night sharply critized the championship playoff system of the interhigh series in a situation such as is extant this year, where a school has not lost a game in the series, yet must risk the title to a team it already has beaten.

McGoffin spoke at a football banquet at Eastern High School and the school officials present—and there were plenty of them—seemed anxious for him to change the subject.

"Any team," the veteran official said, "which is decisively on top of the league when the season ends, should be the automatic titleholder."

Colts Deserving

He referred to the Coolidge Colts, which were unscored on in interhigh competition until the Western Raiders tied them, 12-12, last week. Now Coolidge must play the winner of the Tech-Wilson game an Thanksgiving Day for the championship. Coolidge beat both teams in series play.

McGoffin said he saw no reason why a team which had won or tied all its league games should be forced to jeopardize its titular position in a post-season game against a late starter, which it had beaten previously. He contended that a let-down after a hard season of keeping at prime strength was quite probable and an upset in such a game easily possible.

Magoffin's remarks, obviously not on schedule, came after he had been presented a plaque by Charles Hart, principal of Eastern, for his 25 years of continuous service as a sports official for District public schools.

Ballou on Program

Speakers besides Magoffin and Hart were Dr. Frank W. Ballou, recently retired superintendent of schools; R. L. Haycock, superintendent of schools; Dallas Shirley, superintendent of physical education for senior high schools; N. A. Danowski, principal at Western High and former assistant principal at Eastern, and Dick Mentzer, Eastern coach and director of physical education.

Students who received letters for football at the dinner were:

Clovers Challenge Little Hoya 105's

The 105-pound Clovers football team last night issued a challenge to the Georgetown Prep 105-pound team for a game. If the Little Hoyas are interested, they may call Franklin 4493 any time this week after school hours.

Tech, Wilson Play Off Tie Thanksgiving

By Tom Moore McBride

Thanksgiving, turkey and football seem to go together very nicely indeed, and if you should happen to be suffering from a dearth of the No. 2 item mentioned, there's no reason why you shouldn't make up for it in your grid diet, for there are two red-hot games on the menu for that day.

First, thre's the Tech-Wilson battle for the No. 2 spot in the interhigh series at Central Stadium at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Second, there's the long and all-consuming rivalry between Washington-Lee of Arlington and George Washington High of Alexandria, which will be brought to a head once more at the Alexandrians' field at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

For an appetite-whetter, St. John's powerhouse, which downed Gonzaga in the Catholic classic last week, will take on Devitt Prep at Anacostia Stadium at 3:45 p. m. today.

Both Played in Hard Luck

In playing off the tie for second place in the series, Wilson and Tech both will be battling against the hard luck that has beset both schools' teams throughout the season. Tech seems to have conquered it, for Gene Emsweller, out most of the season, and the rest of the line-up will be in the game if nothing goes amiss, but Wilson faces the probable loss of three players.

Coach Joe Carlo said yesterday he doubted whether his great kicking back, Pearce Godfrey, would be able to be in the game. Godfrey has been out of the last two with a bad ankle. In addition, Russell Keith, another backfield mainstay, probably will be unable to start, and ace tackle Tom Brewer turned up on the sick list yesterday.

As Carlo put it, "We've had everything happen but the stadium falling in on us."

In a somewhat happier frame of mind was Tech's Coach Duke Jacobs, whose Trainers lost the first two out of three games, tied the other one, but which have made a surprising comeback. Duke explained the phenomenon by saying that his team was green and so light that they were unable to figure on any single wingback plays. Consequently, he was forced to resort to the "T", and it was that long before the boys caught on to the plays. The Duke, incidentally, believes his team has some surprises in store for Wilson.

Tech Plays Well Scouted

"We'll have to if we expect to beat 'em," he said. "We've been too well scouted on everything we've used so far."

The Generals-Presidents game Thanksgiving morning is a toss-up, too. For the last couple of years Washington-Lee has come out on top with its powerhouse teams which have beaten everything in the area, but this year G-W has high hopes of snatching the game that both schools point for all season. That's based mostly on the comparative score the Virginia schools registered against the District's league-leading Coolidge, for the Presidents took the Colts handily and Gil Conn's men soundly trounced the Generals a couple of weeks later. But with all other games merely preliminaries for the annual meetnig, that's past performance which may well be left outside the stadium.

Third Son Is Born To Mrs. Bob Considine

New York, Nov. 23 (INS).—It's a baby boy for the Bob Considines.

The wife of the International News Service war correspondent, just returned from an assignment with the U. S. Eighth Air Force in Britain, gave birth this afternoon to a 7-pound 5 ounce boy at Harkness Pavillion of the New York Medical Center. Both mother and son are "doing well."

The baby, the Considines' third child, will be named Dennis Joel.

Gambling on Games Causes Bar for Life

Action Follows Four-Month Investigation; Wilmington Sportsman Named Club President

By Charles Dunkley

Chicago, Nov. 23 (AP).—In the most drastic action of his 22-year regime, Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, today barred William D. Cox, president of the Philadelphia Phillies, from baseball for life for gambling on games in which his club was involved.

Landis ruled Cox was "permanently ineligible" to hold any baseball office hereafter, either in the majo ror minor leagues. His decision was reached after a three-month investigation, in which he interviewed Cox several times.

Cox could not be reached during the day, but said "goodby to baseball" in a radio broadcast over WOR tonight. "I made some small and sentimental bets before I learned of the rule against this," he said, "I leave it to the public and my friends to decide whether I was wrong."

No Immediate Plans

At a press conference in New York, Cox later said he had no immediate plans except to continue to run his lumber business.

Asked if he planned to go to court about the ouster he declared "I don't think there's anything to go to court about. I thought it best to sell my stock and make it a clean slate."

"I regarded my small bets in the same light as one would bet on a football game or wager a carton of cigarettes, a hat or a box of cigars. I first noticed the rule while I was reading the rule book late one night. I immediately ceased my bets."

After the ouster had been announced, directors of hte Phillies, meeting in Philadelphia, elected a 27-year-old former Duke football player, Robert R. M. Carpetner, jr., of Wilmington, Del., president, succeeding Cox. Carpenter's father, an executive of the E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., purchased all of Cox's stock, the exact amount of which was not revealed. Young Carpenter is president of the Wilmington Blue Rocks of the Interstate League.

Landis, in a formal two-page typewritten statement, reported:

1. Cox had resigned as president and director of the National League Phillies last Thursday.

2. Investigation of reports that Cox was betting on games last season was begun in August.

3. A week ago he notified Cox that a hearing on the charges would be held in New York December 4.

4. As the result of admission by Cox and because Cox refused to attend the December 4 hearing in an effort to clear himself, Landis was obliged to notify Cox that:

". . . Your betting on baseball games of the Philadelphia club, as to which games, as chief executive of that club, in charge of operations, you had a 'duty to perform' requires me . . . to declare you to be permanently ineligible to hold any office or employment with the Philadelphia club or any other club or league party to the major league agreement or major-minor league agreement."

Cox, wealthy 34-year-old New York lumberman and sportsman, took over the financially troubled Phillies as president and syndicate head less than a year ago and his fling in the game was marked by a series of tempestous events, culminating in the sudden firing of Stanley (Bucky) Harris as manager of the club in the middle of last season.

Then Cox Learned the Rule

Landis stated Cox had resigned as president and director of the Phillies three days after the commissioner had ordered him to appear at a formal hearing on charges against him in New York next week.

Cox refused to attend that scheduled meeting, writing Landis that he had "decided to devote all of my time to my lumber business, essential to the war effort."

Cox, Landis said, after first asserting that "any allegations" he had bet on games "were ridiculous" admitted to him in New York on November 3 and later in Chicago that he had placed through a bookmaker "approximately 15 to 20" bets of from $25 to $100 per game on Philadelphia to win, but had discontinued the wagering about May 20 when he learned of the rule prohibiting such betting by persons having connections with the sport.

This rule was promulgated by the major and minor leagues in 1927 following charges of gambling made against Ty Cobb, then manager of the Detroit Tigers, and Tris Speaker of the Cleveland Indians. Both Cobb and Speaker were cleared by Landis.

Landis' statement further said that Cox continually refused to give him a "full statement" on his betting activities, and had maintained that "inasmuch as I have resigned, I do not see any useful purpose would be served by my attending any hearing before you."

Disagreeing, Landis concluded that "the proposed hearing was

Fitzsimmons Will Remain As Manager

Philadelphia, Nov. 23 (AP).—Fat Freddy Fitzsimmons apparently will continue as manager of the Phillies.

FITZSIMMONS

Robert R. M. Carpenter, jr., elected president of the club today to succeed William D. Cox, said "at this time I can say we do not contemplate any change in management.

"I have not met Mr. Fitzsimmons, but plan to do so at the earliest possible moment."

Fitzsimmons, former Brooklyn Dodgers pitcher, became the Phillies manager last summer after Bucky Harris was ousted.

Owners in Meeting

Philadelphia, Nov. 23 (AP).—A meeting of Phillies stockholders was in progress here when news of the ouster of William D. Cox from organized baseball reached Philadelphia.

Reporters relayed the information to Bill Phillips, the club's public relations representative, who said Cox was expected at the meeting but had not yet arrived.

Phillips said no statement would be issued immediately.

There has been published reports that a dividend would be declared at the meeting. If true, the payment would be the first since 1916, the year after the Phillies won their first and only pennant.

Under the New York lumberman's management, the Phillies drew 466,816 paid customers here last season.

Cox Utica Director

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 23 (AP).—William D. Cox, president of the Philadelphia Club of the National League, who was ousted today from organized baseball, is a director and stockholder of the Utica Eastern League Club.

A working agreement between the Phillies and Utica has been in force since last summer.

Charlie Keller Reclassified 1-A

Frederick, Md., Nov. 23 (AP).—The Selective Service classification of Charlie Keller, New York Yankees outfielder, was changed from 3-A to 1-A today by his Frederick draft board. The board did not indicate when Keller would be called for induction.

The father of three children, Keller has been employed in a war plant since the end of the World Series.

Jockey Kirk Boots In Dinsen at Marlboro

Stretch Drive Wins by Neck In Photo Race

By Walter Haight

Marlboro, Md., Nov. 23.—Jockey Carson Kirk put up a strong stretch ride today to win with Mrs. Gordon H. Pearce's Dinsen in the fifth race, best offering on a blustery Tuesday program. The Silver Spring boy drove the 4-year-old into a neck photo decision over Mrs. L. M. Hasson's Lee's Jimmie. Five lengths farther back came C. W. Davis' Storminess to be third in a field of eight going 6½ furlongs.

Dinsen, making his second start at the meeting, drew a steady backing and paid a $6 mutuel while stepping the sprint route over a fast track in 1.29 3/5. A crowd of 4000 saw the day's action, shivering through the two final events.

Alseleda set the early pace, followed by Lee's Jimmie and Dinsen. The pacemaker finally weakened and Lee's Jimmie went to the front. Kirk then placed Dinsen to a drive and the 4-year-old came up abreast of the leader entering the stretch. From that point to the wire the two battled it out, with Dinsen having just a little more punch than his rival.

The daily double of $38 went to 199 ticket holders. H. M. Johnson's Charmful won the first race, paying $6.50, while the Washington-owned Flamingo Farms' Bill K proved best at an individual mutuel of $8.

Jockey Eddie Smith, Washington boy who has retired from the saddle until spring, was a visitor today along with Art (Bet 'Em All) Brown and Jimmy (Bars) Sager . . . No. 5 is the best post position in sprints here according to a check up . . . Six horses have won from that stall . . . The daily double yesterday was 7 and 8, the same as on Monday . . . Wagering for the first five days averaged slightly over $226,000 . . . Mutuel Manager Donald Hay was ill yesterday and Eddie O'Hara took over the task of handling the betting . . . W. Hightower is topping the trainers here with five winners . . . Jockey agent Lefty Wilhelm has changed his plans and will delay his Florida trip to take mounts for Jockeys Patsy Grant and Willie Rudert at Charles Town . . . Augie Gibson, trainer of Walter Haight when the colt runs, is on the sick list . . . Donald Yates, popular Baltimore trainer, heads for Tropical Park with his large stable this weekend . . . Post time for Thanksgiving and Saturday will be 1 p. m., a half hour earlier than on other days . . . Jockey J. Murray who rode the winner, Wayuma, in the fourth race was suspended for the remainder of the infield at the first turn.

Slater Tells Touchdowners Navy Will Win

Lieut. Col. Bill Slater, United States Army, formerly one of the country's outstanding sportscasters, delighted a full house with his anecdotes at the Touchdown Club yesterday.

Colonel Slater, among other things, stepped out with a flat prediction that Navy would defeat Army in the annual service tilt at West Point, N. Y., Saturday.

"How?," a friendly heckler shouted from one of the tables.

"Not how, brother," Slater rejoined pleasantly, "AND HOW!"

Colonel Slater also discussed the last Olympic Games which he broadcast from Berlin in 1936.

He said that the United States won most of the major competitions, but added: "Those Nazis claimed points for rug weaving, knitting and crocheting that could not be denied!"

The American sense of humor stole the show and won the admiration of all other nations in the Olympics of 1936, he said.

Clyde Scott, Bullis School's great back, who will enter the United States Naval Academy next fall, was voted the outstanding schoolboy football player of the week and presented the $25 War Bond by the Touchdown Club. Scott personally scored two touchdowns and passed to the other last Saturday when Bullis lost to the Navy Plebes in Annapolis, 51 to 19.

Phils' President Ousted by Landis

intended to develop fully statements of the facts by yourself and others and to give you an opportunity to present anything you might want to have considered. Therefore, I am not in accord with your views that such a hearing would serve no useful purpose."

In his radio broadcast, Cox said he made his "comparatively small bets" early in the season, but ceased when he found it was a violation of the rule.

"When I took over the Phillies," he said, "they were almost a dead orgnaization with the hot breath of the sheriff on their necks. . . . They have just completed their most prosperous season in years and have a good team under Manager Fred Fitzsimmons.

"My friends know I worked night and day to build up the team and its financial condition. Most of the money put into the club I put in myself. I now find that because I admitted backing my team with a few bets I have been banned from the game I love for the rest of my life.

"In saying goodby to baseball forever I want to say . . . I looked up to, rather than at, my fellow club presidents with a sincere hope that I could emulate the best of their individual deeds.

"I hope I have not offended them. I have endeavored in every way to lead an exemplary life and conduct myself with the proper viewpoint to this great sport. Good luck and goodby to everyone in baseball."

Billy Banks, Vic Creelman On Uline Card

A special eight-round semifinal in which Billy Banks, local Negro lightweight, will meet the sensational Vic Creelman, New Jersey knockout artist who has 28 straight victories under his belt, was announced yesterday by Promoter Goldie Ahearn for his Monday night card at Uline Arena.

At the same time, Ahearn announced the featured bout between Washington's welterweight star, Frankie Wills, and Ernest (Cat) Robinson, New York Negro, had been advanced from eight to ten rounds at the request of both Wills and Robinson. Each, strangely enough, believes the added distance enhances his chances.

Creelman, who has been demanding a shot at either Jackie Wilson or Lew Hanbury since he knocked out Pittsburgh's Billy Bates, a stablemate of Wilson's, has been promised a main-event bout in the event he gets over the talented Banks, who only recently defeated Pedro Hernandez and went six rounds with Chalky Wright, former featherweight champ, before being forced out of action with a closed eye, at Philadelphia.

Bainbridge, Md., Nov. 23 (AP).—Johnny Mize, former first baseman of the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Giants, is recuperating from an illness and will return shortly to his duties at the Bainbridge Naval Training Station, Navy doctors said today.

National Boxing Association To End 'Chain Store' Titles

Paterson, N. J., Nov. 23 (AP).—The National Boxing Association announced today a move to end "shotgun" championship return bouts and "chain-store" fights not "based on championship merit."

NBA President Abe J. Greene said the organization would deny championship recognition to any contest unless the proposed match first had been submitted to the NBA for approval.

The ruling was adopted, Greene said, "to avoid the seesaw game such as is now operating between Bob Montgomery and Beau Jack, in which first one, then the other, gets a return bout.

"If a man loses a title, and there is public demand or a sportsmanlike reason for a return bout, naturally NBA would approve," Greene said, "but the very managers and fighters who cry for a championship opportunity resort to all kinds of ruses and subterfuge to avoid giving other contenders the same chance."

Another Example Cited

He cited as another example the return contest between Phil Terranova, featherweight champion, and Jackie Callura, the man he dethroned.

"Callura accepted Terranova as a challenger in New Orleans almost at the expiration of his time limit for title defense. Apparently, however, he extracted from Terranova a new contract for a return engagement, which the champion's manager now insists was wrung from him. This is not our problem, however. It is for the New Orleans commission to pass on. Now Terranova objects to meeting Callura again on the ground that he has defeated him twice."

Greene said NBA declines "to recognize a third Callura-Terranova contest as a title defense. We do not regard Callura as a logical contender."

Greene explained that Terranova stands suspended in all NBA States until he fulfills a contract to fight Callura in New Orleans, or until the Louisiana commission lifts his suspension.

From "THANKSGIVING DAY" by Lydia Maria Child

THEY WON'T BE HOME to Grandfather's house for Thanksgiving this year.

But their hearts will be there. And even after they've stuffed themselves with G. I. turkey, they'll still be hungry for news from home . . .

Hungry for news from their own folks that only letters can bring (do any of us write often enough?), and hungry for the news of what everybody is saying and thinking, arguing over and laughing about back in the good old U. S. A.

You must find it comforting to know so many U.S. magazines and newspapers are reaching our boys these days. For example, a copy of TIME or LIFE goes abroad each week for every six men in the U.S. armed forces overseas.

And of course, it makes us very proud to know that America's fighting men turn so eagerly to TIME and LIFE for so much of their news-reading and their fun-reading—

. . . that they look to us for clear, forthright reports on the war and the peace—reports that may point the course of all their living for years to come . . .

. . . that in far-off lands and seas, they wait impatiently each week for TIME and LIFE to bring them the point of view and opinions, the sights and sounds of home.

To make the news make sense

To see the world, to eyewitness great events

The favorite magazines of our officers and men

(A copy of TIME or LIFE goes abroad each week for every six men in the U.S. armed forces overseas.)

From TIME's mailbag . . .

"Well done, TIME! The impartial way you handle news (good and bad) is most important to us men in the Armed Forces. Victories should not be over emphasized or losses minimized—thus making those at home feel the war has already been won. People should be given the facts, good or bad, week after week, which is what your magazine does."
Lieut. L. L.; SC., U.S.N.

"The friends and good will TIME's service is making among service men will long outlive the war. TIME, the soldier's friend in war years, will remain his friend when he swaps the uniform for slacks and a sport jacket."
S/Sgt. W. B., U.S. Army Air Forces

"TIME's Pony Edition galloped half way around the world to reach me only 12-days old. It sure found a welcome stall, because with magazines at least four-months old, no good newspapers, and no radio reception from the States, the thing we crave most is News. At least twelve of my fellow officers read it and our Intelligence Room gobbles it."
Capt. E. M.; U.S. Army Air Forces

"I was a soldier less than a week when I realized I would lose contact with everything worth-while if it weren't for TIME."
Pvt. E. R., U.S. Army

"Reading TIME way up here close to the Arctic Circle makes me feel that the States, which I left a year ago, are almost close enough to reach out and touch."
1st. Lieut. T. P. Jr.; U.S. Army

"After listening to local broadcasts or reading local papers, most officers say: 'I'll wait for TIME, and find out what really happened'. TIME's careful, restrained handling of the war news has made many new friends."
Lieut. R. McK., U.S. Army Air Forces

From LIFE's mailbag . . .

"Believe me, the down-to-earth editorial policy of LIFE is tops. Whenever a copy reaches me I am overwhelmed by comrades, wanting first look at it . . ."
M/Sgt. G. C.; U.S. Army

"Stationed far away from civilization for over a year, I have come to depend on LIFE's excellent pictures and frank editorials more and more to keep me posted on happenings throughout the U.S.A. and the world. Your pictures of places I've been almost make me feel at home. Many other boys here also voice the same feeling . . ."
Sgt. J. Y., U.S. Army Air Forces

"Your issues of LIFE are enjoyed by myself and the whole darned outfit. We look for them at any mail call and the waiting list for a look at LIFE is as long as the 'chow line'."
S/Sgt. A. V., U.S. Army Air Forces

"Everyone from the General on down drops everything when a LIFE comes. Often we see in LIFE news from our own area we didn't know about . . ."
Corp. E. D., U.S. Army

"My appreciation, not just for any one article in any one issue, but for LIFE as an institution. The way it pictures current world history, geography, and the American heritage, make it today's most realistic, easily understandable document. And, its editorial policy makes it a clearing house for democratic thought."
Ensign M. K.; USNR

"A line from this Doggie to congratulate you on your fine truthful accounts of world events. We here in a Canadian hospital 'Somewhere in Sicily' are especially grateful . . ."
Pfc. A. J., U.S. Army

"I have been borrowing, begging or stealing LIFE for months . . . the boys over here fight to see this brilliant magazine."
Pvt. J. McK.; U.S. Army

This photograph was taken on Guadalcanal at holiday time last year, as the traditional feast took place in spite of Japs and jungle. The same scene will be re-enacted this year on many fronts, in camps, aboard ship . . . wherever America's defenders fight for her on the old original American holiday.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

State Dept., FEA Agree on Policy

An agreement that outlines in detail the jurisdiction in foreign fields of the State Department and Foreign Economic Administration has been signed by Undersecretary Edward Stettinius and Leo T. Crowley, FEA boss. In brief, State will lay down the policy and FEA will operate under it. But despite the agreement, State officials — outside of Stettinius' office—are plugging for the creation of a super board which would be dominated by State and which would tell Crowley how to run FEA and Governor Lehman how to operate United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation.

KLUTTZ

Nathan H. David, 30-year-old assistant general counsel at Federal Communications, has enlisted in the Navy and he'll report for duty Saturday. He's married and has two children . . . Milton Schwartz, a War Department statistician, was inducted into the Army last week but he's back now in his old job and he wears the uniform of a private . . . Henry Grady, the former State Department Assistant Secretary who was appointed by the President to be a foreign economic adviser, will deal only in foreign political questions. His first big job will be to help work out a government in Italy.

Meeting Off

The meeting of the Senate Civil Service Committee was canceled abruptly yesterday. Senator Byrd was called out of the city because of the death of former Governor Price of Virginia, and he wants to be at the meeting when the recreation of the Board of Legal Examiners is discussed. Another meeting has been set up for Friday. The committee also may consider Senator Aiken's bill which calls for retirement for Federal workers after 30 years' service, regardless of age. Chairman Downey's bill, which would require Uncle Sam to pay up the retirement accounts of Government employes in the military can be expected to be reported favorably by the committee. This bill would fit into the President's program for veterans which was sent yesterday to Congress. Among other things, the President suggested that the Social Security accounts of veterans in private industry be paid up by the Government so they could be paid unemployment compensation after they are discharged.

A BUREAUCRAT is a Government employe who can give you the answer to your question, but he always refers you to five other guys. That's another definition this column has received in our little campaign to find out what and who is a bureaucrat. Send us your definition and it'll be printed here, if it's printable . . . The GOVERNMENT GIRL CLUB will have a tea for its new members Sunday from 4 to 6 o'clock in the parish hall of St. John's Church, 821 16th st. nw. Plans for the fashion show the club is sponsoring will be discussed . . . Herbert M. Faust, the chief of War Production Board's salvage section, resigned his $40,000 private job to go on the Government payroll at $8000 . . . One of the very best Christmas gifts you can give is a pint of blood to our fighting men. Call the Red Cross for an appointment.

Van Buskirk Resigns

Arthur B. Van Buskirk, special assistant at Foreign Economic Administration, has submitted his resignation. Bernhard Knollenberg, who is running the lend-lease show for FEA and who has threatened to resign many times, now says he'll stay on for awhile. . . . The recruiting programs of Army and Navy are producing results and between them several hundred clerks, typists, and stenographers are being brought here every week. However, the services are making it tough on other agencies that need help. The services pay transportation costs here of the new workers, while other agencies are forbidden to. . . . Contract employes at the Naval Research Laboratory and other Navy offices here have seen canceled the pay raises which were supposed to take effect on January 1. The employes were told that raises would now be given annually instead of every six months.

That ancient myth that no Federal workers are ever fired has been exploded in a Civil Service report which is in the hands of Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee. During the 1943 fiscal year, the commission told Ramspeck, three out of every 100 employes were fired for cause. Five years ago the percentage was .257. In other words, the number of firings in the service has jumped 10 times. Navy led in discharging nearly 5 per cent. War Department was one of the 14 agencies that failed to answer the commission's request for information.

However, these are abnormal times and the big increase in firings was to be expected. And all the people listed as "fired" weren't really fired. They just disappeared on payday and they haven't been heard from since. They take jobs elsewhere and they don't want to be bothered with going through the red tape to get released. This is particularly true in the Government's industrial operations. In a war plant I visited several months ago 20 per cent of the employes who quit were listed as "fired," yet practically all of them just disappeared after payday.

Sex Hygiene Termed Teacher-Parent Duty

Dr. Murphy Outlines Plan for Curbing Youth Delinquency

Teachers as well as parents have the responsibility of learning and understanding sex and mental hygiene if delinquency among children is to be curbed, Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, chairman of the subcommittee on health, last night told a meeting of the District Board of Education.

Absence of such instruction—plus the dominant factor of substandard home and recreation environment—have resulted in "shocking" conditions among school children, he declared.

Statistics prepared by the Department of School Attendance reveal that during the first three months of 1943, 164 illegitimate babies were born to girls of school age. Averaged over the entire year, this figure would indicate that there will be 656 such births for 1943, involving more than 1 per cent of all District school girls, it was stated.

1032 Acute Cases

The figures further disclose that fully 1032, or 1 per cent of all our school children, are acute cases of venereal disease recently acquired. Approximately 40 per cent of social diseases contracted by servicemen in Washington during July and August can be traced to contact with school-age girls, it was stated.

Responsibility for these conditions must be partially borne by the public school system, Dr. Murphy said. Since delinquency is only one symptom of what he termed "emotional maladjustment," the entire field should be explored with a view to formal corrective instruction in the schools, he added.

Since emotional difficulties, often leading to delinquency, start primarily in the home, usually as a result of parental discord, Dr. Murphy said, parents who are themselves maladjusted should be urged to study sex and mental hygiene either in the public schools or through proper social agencies.

Psychiatric Rejections

One of the more concrete results of ignorance in the subject is the fact, Dr. Murphy said, that 10 per cent of men examined for military service are rejected for psychiatric reasons, while another 30 per cent are discharged for the same cause.

A genuine attempt to cure the maladies, aggravated by wartime conditions, would involve setting up of neuro-psychiatric clinics, preparation of courses and teaching instruction adjusted to the comprehension levels of school pupils, engaged couples, parents, "including applicants for divorce," and teachers, he said.

Citizens Study Problem

The Hampshire Heights Citizens Association last night heard talks on juvenile delinquency and modes of combating it. Among the speakers were the Rev. E. G. Goetz, pastor of the Mount Zion Lutheran Church; Miss Emily Fryer, principal of the Keene-Rudolph School, and representatives from this school and Barnard School Parent-Teacher Associations.

At the conclusion of the talks the association voted to name a committee to investigate and report on juvenile delinquency in the area.

City News In Brief

Judge Walter J. Casey in Municipal Court held in contempt of court yesterday two Negroes who changed their stories in court after they were trapped by their falsehoods. They are James Davis, 27, of 507 P st. nw., fined $50 and Arleatha Isaac, 29, of 1802 L st. nw.

Davis also was sentenced to pay a $100 fine or serve 180 days in jail for taking a car from a parking lot where he was employed. In the trial, Davis and Miss Isaac denied driving the car to Baltimore, but after another witness testified they had, Davis admitted the act.

Merchandise Stolen

Sam Wong, proprietor of Dukes Restaurant at 1334 14th st. nw., reported to police that thieves entered the restaurant early yesterday and stole 23 cases of various brands of whisky, 20 pounds of butter, two boxes of cigars, 10 cartons of cigarettes, $200 in cash and a cash register. The total value of the loot was placed at $973.

Orphans to Be Guests

Groups of children from orphanages and settlement houses, 200 at least, will be guests of the "Pleasure Fund" Saturday morning at the first of the performances of children's plays at the National Theater.

Edwin Strawbridge will put on his ballet, "American Dances" as the opening entertainment of the children's program which will consist of six plays and entertainments to be given monthly each Saturday morning.

Heavy Traffic Fine

Walter E. Crump, 35, Negro, of 425 O st. nw., was fined $115 in Municipal Court yesterday for going through seven stop signs, speeding and driving without lights and without a permit. Judge Neilson told Crump: "You are extremely fortunate you are not in court on a negligent homicide charge, also."

Orchestra to Play

A concert will be given tonight at 8:15 o'clock by the Marine Band Symphony Orchestra in the Marine Barracks.

The orchestra will be led by Capt. William F. Santelmann, assisted by Henry Weber. The program will include compositions by Mozart, Delius, Mendelssohn, Bach and Hayden.

Broken Ceiling

OPA Gets $3472 From Meat Dealer

Attorneys for Witt & Co., Inc., a meat wholesaler here, admitted in District Court yesterday that the company during March and April violated price ceiling regulations by accepting "side payments" of from 3 to 5 cents a pound of meat in sales to retailers.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts then granted a final injunction to prevent future violations by the Witt company which in a consent decree paid $3472.89, or triple damages to the OPA for money which the company admitted taking in illegally.

In a prepared statement, Joseph B. Danzansky, the Witt attorney, stated the lack of price ceilings on livestock until recently placed the firm in such a position that it either had to pay excess prices to slaughterers and therefore pass on the addition to the retailer or go out of business.

"I feel in this case that the responsibility must be shared by the Office of Price Administration. However, we realize that it is necessary for the local office to do an enforcement job, and we will be happy to cooperate in the future," Danzansky said.

The OPA said Witt, through its employes Berry Wright, 1107 E st. sw., and J. F. Schumacher, of the same address, made illegal sales to nine grocers here.

In his opinion, Justice Letts said, "The continuation of such sales of beef, veal, lamb and pork at prices in excess of the applicable prices fixed by the OPA would be injurious to the war effort and the national anti-inflation program. The injuries to the public, the defendants' competitors, and the national war effort would be irreparable."

The OPA was represented by Chief Attorney John L. Laskey and District Assistant Enforcement Attorney Carl W. Berueffy.

Turkey Supply Gains Slowly In District

Thirteen traffic fatalities here this month—ten of them since November 13—were attributed by traffic authorities last night to liquor and fast driving.

Both Lieut. William J. Liverman, chief of the Accident Investigation Unit, and Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer disclosed that all but four of this month's deaths were due to these two causes.

Four pedestrain casualties figured in the total and the others were so-called "crash" deaths—fatalities resulting from collisions either with other vehicles or fixed objects.

Eleven traffic deaths were recorded here during the month of November last year. Of this number only one was a crash victim. All of the others were pedestrians and their deaths were blamed principally on their own carelessness.

Traffic fatalities in the Nation as a whole have presented a big problem. Figures show that more people have been killed in accidents (46,000) than have servicemen in battle (21,940) since the attack on Pearl Harbor. Since December 7, 1941, servicemen wounded or missing in battle have been reported to number 65,170, but 1,600,000 persons have been injured in accidents in this country and of that number 110,000 have been permanently disabled.

Until this month, Washington traffic fatalities showed a decided decrease in comparison with the number given last year at the same time and the District has held second place for five consecutive months in the safety rating of larger cities by the National Safety Council. Van Duzer said yesterday, however, that the chances of holding second place at the end of the year are now very slim for the District.

Julian L. Tyler Is Absolved of Embezzlement

Julian L. Tyler, 26, of Richmond, Va., was exonerated in District Court yesterday of a charge of the embezzlement of $713 from the Union Station, where he was a ticket seller.

Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher directed a verdict of not guilty after defense witnesses testified Tyler had properly deposited the money in question in a safe in the terminal.

Testimony also indicated Tyler was held for four days in jail by police. The money has not been recovered.

Tyler was defended by Attorneys James R. Kirkland and Lloyd Fletcher.

tion was a close race between Dr. Dun and Chaplain Aldrich, with Dr. Dun finally elected on the third ballot with 51 lay votes and 48 clerical votes, against Chaplain Aldrich's 17 lay votes and 15 clerical votes. On the second ballot, Dr. Dun received 36 lay, and 40 clerical votes, and Chaplain Aldrich, 26 lay and 20 clerical votes. Closest competitor to them was the Rev. C. Avery Mason of New York City, chairman of the Episcopal Church's "Forward in Service" committee. His name was presented from the floor by Herman J. Galloway, former Assistant Attorney General of the United States and lay deputy from Transfiguration parish here. Dr. Mason received 16 lay and 22 clerical votes on the second ballot, and 14 lay and 25 clerical votes on the second ballot. A total of 92 clerical and 85 lay votes was cast on the third ballot.

The Bishop-elect of Washington is both dean and professor of systematic theology at the Cambridge institution, one of America's largest theological schools.

Dr. Dun was born in New York City May 4, 1892, and was graduated from Yale University in 1914 with a bachelor of arts degree. He was graduated from the seminary he now heads in 1917, and holds honorary degrees from the Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria; Yale University, and Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio.

Practically all of Dr. Dun's career has been spent in the seminary, of which he was elected dean in 1940, succeeding Dr. Henry B. Washburn. He has authorized a number of widely read books, including "The King's Cross," 1926; "We Believe," 1934, and "Not By Bread Alone," 1942.

An outstanding preacher, Dr. Dun is said to be very active in the civic life of his community and in close touch with the social day. According to a number of delegates to yesterday's convention, he is a good executive and administrator. He married Catherine Whipple Pew in 1917, and they have two children.

The nominating committee, in its report, highly praised Dr. Dun after thoroughly investigating his record, and knowing about him through personal experience. He was a prominent figure at the General Convention of the Episcopal Church in Cleveland in October, where he participated in discusesions of the proposed union with the Presbyterian Church.

He was fourth choice of the committee of the Diocese of Pennsylvania for the office of bishop coadjutor in 1942. He has been president of the Family Welfare Society at Cambridge, member of the Theological Society, Elihu Club of Yale, and Phi Beta Kappa.

In a speech seconding the nomination of Dr. Dun at the convention, T. E. Robertson, former United States Commissioner of Patents, lauded the selection. Robertson said that Dr. Dun was one to whom people listened with "great respect" and he would be a "worthy speaker for Christianity in the great dicosese of Washington." Dr. Dun was first choice of Justice Roberts' nominating committee.

Service chaplains on leave from their parishes figured prominently in the election. In addition to Chaplain Aldrich, there was Lieut. Comdr. Leslie C. Glenn, USN, on leave from St. John's Church, Lafayette Square, and who withdrew his name when he was nominated from the floor.

The name of Chaplain Merritt F. Williams, on leave as canon of the Washington Cathedral, executive officer of the Navy Chaplains' Training School at Williamsburg, Va., and who was chaplain on the sunken Carrier WASP, was "written in" on the ballot.

In addition to Lieutenant Commander Glenn, and Dr. Avery, other clergy nominated from the floor were Dr. Howard S. Wilkinson, rector of St. Thomas' Church here, where President Roosevelt often attends, and Dr. Clyde Brown, Washington diocesan missioner.

"Written-in" nominations included the Rev. Edward Gabler of Christ Church, Navy Yard parish; the Rev. C. Randolph Mengers of St. Columba's here; Dr. Charles T. Warner of St. Alban's and the Rev. Don Frank Fenn, rector of the Church of St. Michael's and All Angels, Baltimore.

Salary Is $12,750

The salary of the new bishop—$12,750—was approved by the convention on motion of Henry P. Blair, chairman of the diocesan department of finance. Of that amount, $2000 will be for secretarial services, and $750 for the pension fund.

The nomination of Dr. Mason of New York by Galloway, a lay delegate, was marked by criticism of the nominating committee. Galloway and two delegates who seconded Dr. Mason's nomination showed letters from the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, presiding bishop, and from others in answer to what Galloway claimed was "malicious criticism" of Dr. Mason's record by an unnamed member of the nominating committee. Galloway also presented a letter from Bishop William T. Manning of New York, addressed to William R. Castle, former Assistant Secretary of State, praising Dr. Mason's record.

One From Shanghai

There was one clergyman at the convention from the Diocese of Shanghai, China. He was the Rev. John G. Magee of the staff of St. John's Church, Lafayette Square, and father of Lieut. John G. Magee, jr., the poet-flier who died in action with the RCAF over England. He wrote the now famous poem, "High Flight." Mr. Magee wants to return to China after this war.

The convention silently prayed for Chaplain David L. Quinn of the Maryland Eastern Shore, who was reported missing in action after the fall of Bataan. Last May the Navy reported him as a war prisoner. The chaplain was well known to the Right Rev. George W. Davenport, retired bishop of the Easton (Md.) Diocese and now acting Bishop of Washington, who was at the convention.

Welfare Plan Approved

A proposal of the diocesan executive council for expansion of the social service and welfare work of the diocese was approved by the convention without a dissenting vote. The program will provide for appointment of an executive director and case worker for the Episcopal City Missions, whose work also embraces the suburban and rural areas.

Meanwhile the "joint committee for a presiding bishop's see" will meet today in New York City to consider the matter of providing an official residence for the presiding bishop in the Nation's Capital. Two members of that committee are the Rev. Clyde Brown, diocesan missioner, and Bishop Noble C. Powell, of the Maryland diocese, former dean and warden of the College of Preachers at Washington Cathedral.

Pay of 1800 Below Limit, Board Says

About 1800 women and minors have received wages lower than legal minimums in the District so far this year, and these underpayments have exceeded those in comparable months of 1941, before the war started, the Minimum Wage Board revealed yesterday.

Underpayments discovered by the board total between $20,000 and $25,000 a year, and this amount is restored to employes, according to Elizabeth Champe, the board's executive secretary.

In most cases back payments are made by employers with alacrity upon suggestion of the board, although recourse is made to the courts in stubborn cases. In addition, individual employes sometimes file suits in court.

Not Total Underpayments

Figures of the board, however, do not represent the total of underpayment, Miss Champe pointed out, as many employes are reluctant to tell on their bosses. Tips from underpaid employes are welcomed.

In addition, a force of only five inspectors is provided to the board, and turnover has kept this group reduced to about three full-time workers, making routine inspections almost impossible.

There are more cases of underpaid women than of minors, and in most cases these persons have been in the same job for years, Miss Champe said. They fight to be allowed to work for $10 or $12 a week out of a "sense of loyalty" to the employer who is cheating them, or because they are afraid complaint will cause them to lose their jobs and oblige them to take defense work which is likely to terminate with the war.

Laundry Experience

Others have ideas of class distinction about their jobs, she said, and prefer to work for substandard wages in a laundry than for higher standard wages as houseworkers.

Most examples of underpayment have been brought to light in the restaurant and public housekeeping trades, it was learned. Minimums in establishments where tipping is allowed are $13.25 for person working between 36 and 48 hours a week or 40 cents an four for fewer hours during the week. Laundries also have notoriously underpaid employes, according to Miss Champe. Legal laundry weekly minimums are $14.50 for 36 to 44-hour week or 40 cents an hour when fewer hours are worked.

Cushlamochree! This shaggy gorgon, currently blacklisted for unfair practices by the Elves, Leprechauns, Gnomes and Little Men's Chowder and Marching Society, yesterday was identified by the Treasury Department as a Squander Bug. He has been eating up your spare dollars for some time, and is a bonafide henchman of that ignoble character, inflation. The Treasury has cited him as a horrible example, thereby enlisting support of its Fourth War Loan Drive from January 18 to February 15. The one item that does not appeal to the beast's character and temperament, you see, is war bonds. Uncle Sam figures that he should choke to death along about February 1. Gosh!

Weekend Visits

Services Cite Overcharges By Hotels

Servicemen are being charged as much as $13 for a Saturday night's lodging at Washington hotels that ask but $3 on Friday for the same room, it was revealed yesterday at a meeting of the servicemen's lodging committee of the War Hospitality Committee which also discussed additional housing facilities for transient service women.

Complaints of the housing racket have been received from enlisted personnel who would register for the weekeno to find that the fee would be more than quadrupled over night. Variations of this include the practice of small hotels that advertise a room for $1 and then inform the serviceman when he registers that only $4 rooms are left.

The committee pointed out that there was no need for the serviceman to patronize these hotels and released statistics for the past weekend that showed 601 beds made available by the committee were unoccupied. However, facilities are urgently needed for the families of servicemen who are in Washington for the weekend. People with rooms, especially those who do not take in roomers professionally were asked by the committee as a patriotic service to register them with the lodging committee by calling National 3900.

Conflicting reports were presented at the meeting of the need for more facilities for servicewomen. The representative of the United Nations Service Center, which is located in the former Capitol Park Hotel, reported that women were turned away every weekend, and the lodging committee's switchboard operator, who makes an hourly check on Saturday night of vacancies, declared that there were more requests than could be filled, while the Travelers' Aid stated that there was no shortage of sleeping quarters.

The committee decided to make available this weekend 10 cots at the USO, located at 1911 H st. nw., while an investigation is made.

Man Tries to Sell A Stolen Suit To True Owner

Philip Needle enjoys buying worn suits at his second-hand shop at 1120 7th st. nw., but he lost his sense of humor when his own suit was offered to him for his consideration and a fee.

At any rate, that's what Melvin Shorter, 18, Negro, found out when he appeared in Municipal Court yesterday. He pleaded guilty of stealing the suit which Needle had sent to the cleaner.

Judge Nathan Margold referred the case to the probation office.

Police said on November 15 a dry cleaner reported Needle's suit was stolen. But last Monday Shorter tried to sell the same suit, brown chalk striped, to Needle, who listened to Shorter praise the garment for a moment. Then he called police.

10 Turkey Awards

Ten persons attending the annual Thanksgiving dance of the Sergeant Jasper Post, No. 13, American Legion, were awarded turkeys. They were G. A. Bakley, C. Farmer, Mrs. P. J. McNicholas, C. A. Fuller, Betty Yauch, Mrs. J. Swetman, B. Lovelace, John E. Bonner, M. E. Murphy, and Raymond Richardson.

Declares Suspect Married Her 10 Days Before Shooting

The second woman to testify that Jeffries D. Henry, 36, married her bigamously was brought into District Court yesterday as his defense attorney sought by a plea of temporary insanity to save the former Metropolitan and White House policeman from the electric chair.

Henry, wan, redhaired and handsome, has exhibited no emotion throughout the week-long trial in which he is accused of the first-degree murder of his 26-year-old wife, Lola, on April 27 while the two of them drank beer in a booth of a restaurant at 1109 13th st. nw.

When Ruby Dorothy Bittman, 20, slim and brunette, took the stand, she gave her name and testified she had married Henry on April 17, 10 days before the shooting.

Justice Matthew F. McGuire appeared startled and he stared at her as the courtroom suddenly became silent.

Last week the Government introduced Angie Pileggi, 25, of Alexandria, who testified Henry married her on April 7, 10 days before the alleged marriage to Miss Bittman. It has been established that Lola Jane Scott Henry, the slain woman, is the legal wife.

Government Rests

After the Government rested its case early yesterday, Defense Attorney J. Bernard Flaherty told the jury Henry was an "alcoholic psychotic," filled with "hallucinations, suspicions and fears."

"He was not drunk at the time the alleged offense was committed. But we intend to show that he was temporarily insane. As a result, he knows nothing about the offense or how it occurred," Flaherty said.

Miss Bittman was brought into the case to establish the plea of insanity.

The first witness for the defense was Mrs. Lulu Henry Cox, sister of th edefendant. She said Henry "drank a little," but until this year always "had his job to check him up."

Then J. F. Kendrick, division chief at the Department of Agriculture, testified Henry was employed there for a time as a bookkeeper. Kendrick said Henry was prone to tell fantastic stories and often appeared to be under the influence of alcohol. He said Henry left the employ of the department in April, 1941, presumably to go to Tuskegee to do war work.

Claims He Drank

O. H. Wells, of 503 Webster st. nw., a former White House policeman, testified that when Henry was employed in a similar position his actions were unstable; he drank, bet on horses, and didn't go home, even refusing to answer roll call. Wells said Henry was taken off the White House position for being drunk and asleep at his post. It was then Henry went back to the Metropolitan Police Force.

When asked why Henry wasn't fired earlier, Wells replied, "One police officer always takes care of another. We all carried him along until we got tired of it." Wells emphasized that that condition occurred only during peacetime, however.

Then Miss Bittman took the stand. She said she has been working as a waitress and hostess in Washington hotels and retaurants since the summer. She said she came here in May, having married Henry in Marion, N. C. The date was just one day after Henry had left Miss Pileggi.

Flaherty also used Government testimony showing Henry had sent his legal wife threatening letters just a few days before the slaying in attempting to show that "writing sprees" were part of the insane condition he says the man was in.

Long Hours Endanger Safety, Bus Dispute Panel Advised

Upon questioning, Oliver and other union representatives said that they understood the difficult problem the company is facing. Drivers also said that they had to ask for these long hours "to be able to feed our families."

Among some 50 exhibits, introduced by the union for the consideration of the panel was a table that the average drivers' wage, last year, was $1986 which, according to Oliver, is $408 short of the Bureau of Labor Statistics minimum health and decency budget for a family of five.

The union, it was understood, is basing its claim for a wage increase on the inequality existing between this one company's rates and rates on other transportation companies.

The management, on the other hand, has been contending all along that it cannot grant the requested wage boost without violating the Little Steel formula.

The panel, consisting of Dr. Paul Douglass, chairman, president of American University; John Twohy, president of the Transit Mixed Concrete Co., Norfolk, Va., and E. J. Shea, American Federation of Labor organizer, opened the hearing with the question of the arbitration clause.

Company's View

Fred J. Rice, company counsel, and Oliver clashed for the first time when Rice upheld the company's position that the contract and the arbitration clause with it had expired May 18, 1943, while the union contends the men are working under this contract until it is replaced by another one.

If the arbitration clause is inoperative, Oliver warned, and if the panel follows the company's contention, this may set a "dangerous precedent" for the entire public transportation industry which has been operating under this arbitration clause for many years.

"I have been trying to convince the men that this clause is operative," Oliver declared, "to keep them on the job. I don't want word to go back to the driver's," he added, and pointed to the number of company employes attending the hearing, "that they cannot look toward arbitration."

New Strike Possible

Oliver strongly implied the likelihood of another work stoppage unless the employes have the assurance that "their demands can be presented for arbitration."

In the detailed statistical presentation of the union, which took up almost the entire hearings yesterday, exhibits were offered to show:

1. There is no difference between operations of buses in this area for other companies and Arnold buses, and therefore there should be no difference in wages.

2. Wage increases for Arnold bus drivers have neither kept pace with the rising living costs nor with increases in most other industries.

3. At the same time company earnings have increased "tremendously," and the general officers' earnings, for instance, which were $15,965 for three men in 1939 have been boosted to $71,289 for four men in 1942.

Represented by the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes (AFL) the employes are asking for a wage increase from 81 to 95 cents an hour for experienced drivers. Various other demands, including a modified "portal-to-portal" pay agreement, will also have to be decided by the panel.

Dr. Douglass called the next meeting for today at 9 a. m., when the overtime question is supposed to be taken up. Rice will follow with the presentation of the company's position.

How to Grow or Look Taller With Proper Diet, Wardrobe

By Ida Jean Kain

You girls who are just a hair-breadth under or over 5 feet tall seem to be simply obsessed these days with growing up—or, with looking taller.

If you are not over 21 without the plus, there is still a chance you may really grow. Give yourself every break by getting the growth materials good nutrition calls for.

Active exercise in the fresh air gives a growing girl an appetite for the foods she needs to grow tall and beautiful. In rope skipping, it's a better exercise trick to swing the rope up and back. That gives the shoulder muscles a much-needed workout and improves posture

Your best bets in foods to grow on are: A quart of milk a day, an egg, a serving of lean meat, fish or fowl, green and yellow vegetables, and citrus and other fruits, along with the whole grain cereals and breads.

The whole grain cereals and breads furnish the B vitamins and while you need all the vitamins, these are especially important to growth. You also get them in wheat germ, yeast tablets, and in the vitamin complex concentrates.

You can get along very well without the pastries, candies, soft drinks and other high carbohydrate foods that put on weight when taken in excess, but do not provide the materials essential to either growth or well being.

If it is too late for you to grow, use the tricks that make you look taller. You can "dress tall." Have your hat the same color as your dress, with a brim that carries the eye upward. Don't buy sailors or flat hats or hats with turned-down brims. They all cut your height.

And don't buy a dress with a yoke of one color and the rest of the dress another. The color difference takes you down by inches. Another combination to avoid is the jacket of one color and the skirt, or dress, of another.

To keep the up and down line unbroken, have the belt the same color as your dress and, if possible, of the same fabric. Keep away from wide, shiny belts, or any lines that go 'round and 'round. If your waistline isn't as trim as it could be, this is even more important.

One of the most successful tricks is no trick at all. It is to stand up to every inch of your height. Standing erect gives you small girls the air of poise and importance you couldn't achieve any other way—except with a million dollars.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

DeGoofey Versus Squander Bug

Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, noted reformer, who for years has campaigned for a crisp $1 bill (or bills) as the ideal Christmas present, now has a new slogan. It is "War Stamps Instead of Knick-Knacks."

Mrs. DeGoofey

The president of the Do Something About It League announced to her press conference yesterday that she had joined forces with the Women's Section of the War Finance Division of the Treasury in its campaign against the Squander Bug. "I understand that this bug, virtually ousted by the British, now is seeking to get intrenched here" said Mrs. DeGoofey. "And from what I see going on among the crazy mobs downtown, particularly around the frippery departments in the stores, it seems to be having plenty of success."

"But Mrs. DeGoofey" protested a hard-boiled rewrite man, "you wouldn't do away with dear old Santa Claus would you?"

"No, but I would certainly restrict his visits to children and service men," was the reply. "I have, as everyone knows, long campaigned against the exchange of gifts, especially useless ones by all adults whose mental and emotional age was above 14 years. This year I see less excuse than ever for such juvenile self-expression. If people must help inflation and deplete merchandise stocks by trading gifts let them at least buy things they urgently need or better still defense stamps."

Mrs. DeGoofey drew a long paper from her capacious bag. "I have here listed some of the people, for whose homes and pocketbooks Squander Bugs have a special amnity" she said. "Here they are:

Squander Bug

"Mrs. Peter Pan who may be anywhere from 25 to 80 and yet nevertheless goes around asking her friends. What is Santa Claus going to bring you?"

"Ethel, Evelyn, Elsie, etc., who run around in the same crowd and who, although they have families of their own, flatten their pocketbooks to give each other expensive gadgets simply because they always have done it.

"Grandma Dote and Aunt Simple and Papa and Mamma Pamper who heap on 1-year-old Junior (who already 'has everything') enough toys and gifts to provide a settlement house on Christmas.

"Mrs. Digges, who begins on December 26 trying to decide whether her husband should buy her a fur coat, an Oriental rug, or a silver tea service the following Christmas.

"Mr. Splurge, who never gives his wife any money for a pair of hose, or underwear for the children, and yet who rushes out just before the stores close on Christmas Eve to get her $35-an-ounce perfume or a pink satin negligee with a train.

"Mr. Toddy, who is frantic about his Christmas liquor, and is rounding up all the black market Scotch he can lay his hands on.

"Mrs. Preen, who has plenty of clothes, but who dashes out to get a new glitter dress and hat that 'look Christmas.'

"Mrs. Lush, who is going to have a pre-war Christmas dinner with all the trimmings though the rest of the world starve, and whose guests after a couple of desserts, some stuffed dates, nuts and candy will repair to the living room to struggle against sleep and that full feeling through a never ending afternoon.

"Mrs. Piddle, who has about 50 persons on her Christmas list, and who wastes days of her time (and the Nation's supply of paper) devising fancy gift wrappings that will immediately be torn up and thrown in the wastebasket.

"Miss Jitters, who has intended to be sensible in her buying this year but who gets panicky in the Thursday night jam and buys anything—just anything—at twice as much as she can afford for everybody just to get it over.

"The elderly Mr. Leer who is spending his spare time and money running down the black market on nylon stockings to 'surprise' some of the young girls who have been smiling at him lately.

"Mrs. Mixmaster, who boasts that she got 487 Christmas cards last year, and is trying to make sure she sends to everyone who sent her.

Mrs. (or Miss) Teeney who keeps saying 'I'm just a kid about Christmas,' or 'After all Christmas comes but once a year,' or 'I really think Christmas gifts ought to be frivolous.'

"All the people everywhere who are 'things addicts,' and who finds it impossible to think of Christmas in terms of anything but holly boxes wrapped in tissue paper."

Mrs. DeGoofey said she would present her list to a volunteer corps of insect exterminators she was recruiting to "disinfect" the Nation of Squander Bugs.

District Zonta Club To Hear Mrs. Moore

The Zonta Club of Washington will have its Thanksgiving meeting at 1 p. m. today at the YWCA, 17th and K streets. Mrs. Nan R. Street of the club's program committee will introduce the guest speaker, Mrs. Alice Speiden Moore, wife of Dr. W. D. Moore, a returned missionary from Italy.

It is anticipated that Mrs. Moore will emphasize to the members of the Zonta Club a great many reasons why Americans can be especially thankful at this time.

Meeting Is Postponed

The regular meeting of Victory B'Nai Brith Women has been changed to Tuesday next, November 30, at which time they will have a joint meeting with Argo B'Nai Brith Lodge. The meeting will be held in the auditorium of the Jewish Community Center at 8:30 p. m.

Author of 'Love in America' Turns Attention to, and Gives Advice on the Wooing of Women Warworkers

"HOW TO WOO and Win a Strong Woman," David L. Cohn's piece in a current magazine, and his latest contribution to the war effort, is sure to be the subject of extensive tea-table talk around Washington, as well as elsewhere. It's a light and lively treatment in which the author of "Love In America" pays attention to the problem of love as it affects the woman warworker . . . and the man who goes courting her.

David L. Cohn

Slyly pointing up the fact that problems in postwar America will be vastly different from what they were back in the days when women purposefully flirted . . . and then fainted into the strong arms of an eligible male, Mr. Cohn turns the spotlight upon the modern riveter-granddaughter of that swooning belle of other days. "A woman who has spent months or years welding the plates of a destroyer or catching hot rivets on the wing and driving them into the steel sides of a tank isn't likely to swoon into a man's arms," he writes. "But she is a far more complex creature than her grandmother."

Granted. Then how can she be wooed and won? Mr. Cohn knows the answer in full . . . as his piece so pointedly proves. As he sees the problem, since the modern inarticulate and baffled lover cannot successfully resort to the methods used by his father, the obvious thing for him to do "is to fall back on the principle of military tactics which dictates that you must use to the best advantage whatever you have at hand. In a world of strong women it is pointless for him to pose as a strong man. Let him be the hurt and wounded boy for whom the world is too much to bear."

The author admits this plan of action may not be exactly cricket, but he doubts if all has ever been cricket in love. "If ladies could swoon with honor into the arms of men in the 1890's when men kept alive the legend of women's inferiority to men, why can't men swoon with with honor into the arms of men in the 1890's when fact has destroyed the legend?"

Why, indeed? Anyway, it's a new idea.

Incidentally, the article, which appears in the December issue of Tomorrow magazine, was written in Washington, where the Mississippi-born author has spent much time in recent years.

JUST RETURNED from the South Pacific, Brig. Gen. John M. Franklin, who left the presidency of the United States steamship lines to join the Transportation Corps, can keep you entertained hours on end with stories he picked up from Uncle Sam's men on duty in that far-flung area.

Lunching with former Gov. O. Max Gardner at the Carlton the other day, he told about a commanding officer in New Guinea who was trying to instill courage in one particular soldier. The latter had frankly admitted he would be frightened out of his wits if an enemy plane suddenly appeared on the horizon and then whizzed overhead.

"No need to worry about it," said the c. o. "It's all a matter of fate. Unless one of those bombs has your name on it," he added with a twinkle, "you're not going to be hit."

"I'm not so much worried about any bomb having my name on it," the soldier came back. "But what about one labeled 'To whom it may concern?'"

"MAY MY HUSBAND come, too?" or "You don't mind if I bring along a couple of friends, do you?" are questions more than one harassed Washington hostess hears just after she issues invitations to tea. Such queries pose enormous problems when parties are planned in apartments and guest lists are made out with great care so that all friends will be invited. Upshot of the whole thing is, of course, that few popular Washington women can ever give just one tea—no matter how large it is. They generally end up by entertaining at a series, and even then somebody is sure to be left out—quite by accident or slip of memory, to be sure . . . but just try to explain that to the victim.

Senora de Munilla, wife of the Spanish Military Attache, decided not long ago to give a tea. She set November 29 as the date, and got out around 350 invitations . . . but forgot to mention it was for women only. Straightway, invitees began asking, "May I bring my husband?" Well, it's still for women only; and it's one of a series . . . and before the season is over, she expects to entertain all her friends in her apartment at Hotel 2400. "I just wish," she says plaintively, "that I could have them all at once . . . but it's impossible."

HERE AND THERE Russell Birdwell, public relations expert, is looking for a new director of his Washington office. Since Cornelius Vanderbilt resigned from the job a few days ago, Birdwell's Capital headquarters have been moved from the Shoreham to the Wardman Park . . . Frances Parkinson Keyes' newest novel, "Also the Hills" is the January choice of the Peoples Book Club . . . Newest addition to the British Embassy is Mrs. Lionel Gibbs, Attache, an attractive 33-year-old widow. She's the daughter of Sir Harold Snagge, chairman of the Napier Airplane Engines Co. . . . Reservations have been pouring in, in droves for tonight's opening of Washington's newest night club, "Jalna" at 1020 Vermont ave. Celebrities will be all over the place . . . and speaking of reservations reminds me—there have been so many for the Women's National Press Club dinner on November 30 in honor of Eric Johnston that the large ballroom of the Willard has been engaged.

FROM MY MANHATTAN informant comes word that blonde and lovely Nedenia Hutton, daughter of Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, is now a working girl. She has taken an 8-hour-a-day job as model for a New York fashion magazine—completely in defiance of her mother's wishes, so they say.

I well remember that back in the days when the beautiful Nedenia ("Deenie" to her friends) was a debutante, Mrs. Davies insisted that publicity about her should be soft-pedaled as much as possible and that only one newspaper picture of her should be carried the entire season. Since then—also due to her mother's clever management—her face has appeared in publication far less frequently than that of the average socially prominent beauty and heiress.

Nedenia Hutton

But now, we can expect to see her likeness in any number of fashion poses. Seems she got her chance for a job several weeks ago when she and her mother were lunching at the Colony and were spotted by a fashion writer who promptly sent over a card, which inquired, "Would you consider a modeling job?"

In less time than it takes to tell about it, the scout was invited over to the Davies table, and Mrs. Davies promptly informed her that Deenie definitely was not interested. Deenie, however, had other ideas about it . . . and she's now hard at work and has moved from her mother's apartment at the Sherry-Netherland to the Fairfax, where she shares an apartment with three friends, Mrs. William Ely Chambers, jr., Miss Grace Eddy and Miss Mary Jo Hall.

Engagements Made Known Here Today

Three engagements of interest in Washington are made known today.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward I. Allen of Ritchie, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marjorie Leah Allen, to Ensign John Wright Williams, jr., USNR, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wright Williams of Prince Frederick, Md.

The bride-elect is a graduate of the University of Maryland and Ensign Williams graduated from Washington College. At present he is stationed at Little Creek, Va.

Bryant—Crooks

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Crooks of Charleston, S. C., announce the engagement of their sister, Miss Genie Ulmer Crooks, to Herwil McClure Bryant of Washington.

The bride-to-be is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Crooks of Kingstree, S. C., and Mr. Bryant is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Harold C. Bryant of Grand Canyon, Ariz. Miss Crooks attended George Washington University and Mr. Bryant was graduated from American University and the University of Toronto. The marriage will take place in the spring.

Striffler—Erskine

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Striffler of McKeesport, Pa., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ferne Katherine Striffler, of Washington, to Capt. John Clark Erskine, U. S. Marine Reserves, son of Dr. and Mrs. William H. Erskine of 3914 New Hampshire ave., this city.

Miss Striffler attended Hurst Seminary and was graduated from a business training school. Captain Erskine was graduated with honors from Bethany College and won his master degree at Clark University. Before the war he was connected with the Library of Congress.

The wedding will take place on Saturday at the home of Miss Striffler's parents and the couple will make their home in San Diego, Calif.

Special Ballet For Children To Be Given

Children of Washington's first families may not have a turkey for Tranksgiving dinner this year, but their holiday weekend will be brightened by a special ballet at the National Theater, sponsored by the Children's Museum.

The ballet, entitled "American Dances" is being presented by Edwin Strawbridge and is the first in a series of six Saturday morning programs to be held here this season for children. This Saturday's dance tells the story of the history of a dancing Nation, beginning with the Pilgrim days and carrying on down to an Army canteen of today.

In the audience on Saturday will be the children of the Ambassador of Denmark and Mme. de Kauffmann, of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Patterson, of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller 3d., and those of Maj. Shuh-ming Chu of the Chinese Embassy staff.

Still others will be the groups of children from local settlement houses and orphanages. Mrs. Avery Coonley, Mrs. S. F. Curtis, Mrs. James B. Helm, Mrs. Morton MacCartney, Harold Hodges, James B. Reynolds are among those who have subscribed to the "Pleasure Fund" for these youngsters.

MRS. JAMES ROSS ALLEN, Jr.,

who before her marriage to Ensign Allen on Saturday, was Miss Eleanor Rozzelle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Rozzelle of Bethesda. Ensign Allen is the son of Capt. James Ross Allen, U. S. Navy, and Mrs. Allen of Drexel Hill, Pa. The couple will make their home in Trenton, N. J., where the bridegroom is stationed

Purely Personal

Mrs. Ralph William Close, wife of the retiring Minister of the Union of South Africa, will be the guest in whose honor Lady Bajpai, wife of the Agent General for India, will entertain at her home on Tuesday, December 7. Mr. and Mrs. Close will return to their homeland after Christmas.

Senora de Parodi, wife of the Military Attache of the Argentine Embassy, will be hostess at tea Saturday afternoon from 5 o'clock until 7.

Col. Wlodzimierz Onacewicz, Military Attache of the Polish Embassy, will be host at a cocktail party at 2651 16th st. Saturday evening from 5:30 o'clock until 8.

Mrs. James M. Souby will entertain at luncheon today at the Shoreham.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Munroe are at the Pierre in New York City.

Miss Cristina Michels, daughter of the Chilean Ambassador, Capt. Louis A. Somoza, son of the president of Nicaragua, and Miss Kiki Teetz met at noon yesterday with other young men and women of the Latin-American diplomatic corps to make final plans for staging the Thanksgiving War Bond and Stamp Fiesta which will be held Thursday evening at the Shoreham. The drive is dedicated to the raising of an air armada from the Latin-American countries.

Dr. and Mrs. James Alexander Lyon are in New York. Another New York visitor is Mrs. Patrick N. L. Bellinger, wife of Rear Admiral Bellinger.

Mrs. Frank J. Oliver and Miss Mary Leonard have returned to Hackensack, N. J., from Washington. While here they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Oliver.

Mrs. Joseph V. Marcoux of Kansas City, Mo., will arrive shortly to live in Washington. Mr. Marcoux, a naval architect, is with the technical division of the United States Maritime Commission.

Appley's Trip Will Serve Dual Purpose

They're making the most of an opportunity for a cross-country trip to serve two purposes. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence A. Appley left their Glen Ridge, N. J., home last evening bound for the West Coast with Chicago their first stop in Mr. Appley's business itinerary for the War Manpower Commission, of which he is deputy director. They'll go on to Portland, where Mrs. Appley will christen a ship at the Kaiser yards there. Their little daughter, 11-year-old Ruthann, will be her mother's maid of honor.

San Francisco and Los Angeles are among the California stopovers in the trip from which Mr. Appley will return to his office here around the middle of December.

On full-time leave from his position as vice president in charge of personnel planning for the Vick Chemical Co., Mr. Appley is executive director and deputy chairman of War Manpower Commission, where he was first director of the Bureau of Placement. In March of 1941 he was expert consultant to the Secretary of War on civilian personnel and in 1939 he was consultant with the Civil Service Commission on executive and organizational problems.

Mr. Appley has an apartment at the Dorchester House, where Mrs. Appley often visits from Glen Ridge, where they have a home. They have two children, Ruthann and an infant daughter, Judith.

Miss Mary Jo Meade Selects Dec. 11 As Wedding Date

Miss Mary Jo Meade, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Frank C. Meade, has selected Saturday, December 11, as the date of her marriage to Lieut. Robert Byers Kadel, USA, son of Mrs. Benjamin C. Kadel of McLean, Va., and the late Mr. Kadel.

The ceremony will take place in the chapel at Fort Myer at 8 o'clock, with Chaplain Thomas W. B. Magnan officiating. A reception for members of the wedding party and the immediate families will follow at the home of General and Mrs. Meade.

Miss Margaret Shearer, daughter of Col. and Mrs. A. M. Shearer, will be maid of honor and only attendant.

Junior League Policy of Postwar Education for Members Outlined

Mrs. Charles Monroe of New York Tells Aim of Booklet "Design for Tomorrow"

By Peggy Preston

The Junior League of America has a "Design For Tomorrow." It is expressed in a mild-appearing gray paper booklet carrying the same title and it was described here yesterday by Mrs. Charles S. Monroe, Coordinator of Field Service for the Association of Junior Leagues of America.

Down from New York at the invitation of the local chapter, pretty, purposeful Mrs. Monroe took time out from a crowded two-day schedule to discuss the subject that is occupying thinking citizens from coast to coast. Of the league's attitude toward postwar planning as put forth in "Design for Tomorrow" she had this to say:

"National headquarters considers it of prime importance that members be prepared to take an active, intelligent part in any policy-making program of the postwar world. As yet our educational program along these lines is still in the embryonic stage. But the initial step has been taken with the publication of this booklet."

Booklet Includes Questions and Answers

"Design for Tomorrow," now being distributed in the United States and Canada, is made up of three articles and a list of pertinent questions and answers. From time to time headquarters will issue additional articles to be included in the loose-leaf booklet. Junior Leaguers this winter will be reading these articles, well written pieces that bear such titles as "The World We Want," and "Underwriting the Future."

Mrs. Monroe pointed out that the booklet is but one example of the league's current policy of educating members for action in public matters. "For some time now we have urged members to attack welfare problems at their source . . . in the constitutions and health laws of their own State or locality," she continued. "League women are being asked to participate in sound, progressive legislative steps that will help to eradicate the condition of, say, child delinquency or public health."

Salutes Activities Of Local Chapter

The activity of local Junior Leaguers in civic enterprises brought a special salute from the visiting executive. After 48 hours of constant meetings with committee heads she is convinced that Washington women are thoroughly imbued with the idea of active participation in public matters.

Regarding the present war-time-work program of the league Mrs. Monroe made known one interesting, and for the league, a revolutionary policy. She described a recent directive sent out from headquarters to local chapters in which it was recommended that all women without young children or home ties should consider either industrial work or service in the armed forces, before accepting voluntary league jobs. In all labor-shortage areas members are urged to offer their services first at employment bureaus.

"The record of league members in industry at present is remarkably high," she pointed out. "And many are carrying the double load of work by day and voluntary service with the league clinics, etc., in the evenings."

Scores of Weddings Take Place In Capital and Nearby Towns

Miss Katherine Moorafates Becomes Bride Of Former Naval Academy Instructor

The past weekend saw scores of service men taking brides in the Capital and nearby towns.

In Annapolis on Saturday Miss Katherine Ruth Moorafates became the bride of Lieut. John Henry Wagenblass, USNR. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Joseph Studer of St. Charles, Ill., and Lieutenant Wagenblass is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Wagenblass of Warsaw, N. Y.

The marriage took place in St. Andrew's Chapel at the Naval Academy with Chaplain R. A. Thomas officiating. Mrs. Norman E. St. Clair served as matron of honor and Lieut. Robert James was best man. A small reception took place at the Officers Club.

The bride is a graduate of Madonna School. Lieutenant Wagenblass, an alumnus of Hamilton College and Harvard, is a former instructor at the Naval Academy and is temporarily assigned to a training base in Florida where the couple will make their home.

Holmes—Lewis

After a wedding trip, Kenneth O. Holmes, USNR, and his bride, the former Miss Virginia Lewis, will make their home in Arlington.

Their wedding was an event of Saturday at the home of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson O. Holmes, in Arlington. The bride is the daughter of Jesse Martin Lewis of Knoxville, Tenn. Officiating at the 7 o'clock ceremony was the Rev. R. L. Wood, assisted by the Rev. J. H. Carroll.

The bride was costumed in a blue suit with brown accessories and carried a white prayerbook with marker of orchids and lilies of the valley. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. William T. White, and Wendell T. White was best man for his brother. A reception took place immediately following the ceremony.

Watkins—Danforth

Of interest in Washington was the marriage in Providence, R. I., on Saturday of Miss Helen Danforth to Capt. John Chester Anderson Watkins, USAAF, a former member of the Baltimore Sun staff.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Murray A. Danforth and the late Dr. Danforth of Providence. Captain Watkins is the son of Col. and Mrs. Dudley W. Watkins of Elgin Field, Ala. The couple were married in the Grace Episcopal Church. Performing the 4:30 service was the Right Rev. James De Wolf Perry, Bishop of Rhode Island, assisted by the Rev. Clarence H Horner.

Given in marriage by her uncle, G. Pierce Metcalf, the bride wore a gown of marquisette and rose-point lace over satin. Her illusion veil was held by a tiara of lace and she carried a bouquet of orchids and bouvardia. Bridesmaids were Miss Marion Danielson of Washington, Miss Madelaine Mather, Miss Nancy Mulford, Mrs. Stephen M. Danforth and Miss Constance Buffum. They were attired in frocks of hyacinth blue taffeta, tricorn hats of a deeper blue tone and carried velvet muffs with sprays of bouvardia.

Edwin P. Young, jr., city editor of the Baltimore Sun, served as best man. Ushers included G. Maurice Congdon, Frederick R. Hazard, jr., Lieut. John Sturges, Dr. Robert Ward, Gordon B. Washburn, Donald S. Babcock, Charles C. Marshall and Frederick B. Read.

The bride was graduated from St. Timothy's School in Catonsville, Md., and from Vassar College. Captain Watkins attended the Cochrane-Bryan School in Annapolis. He has just received the distinguished Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement during aerial warfare in the North African theater. He participated in 40 missions as a pilot and operations of a Warhawk Fighter Group, winning the Air Medal and the 11 Oak Leaf clusters.

Happy Comradeship Between Man and Divorcee Half His Age Starts With Love at First Sight; But Gossip, Overheard, Causes Her Uneasiness

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem may be a figment of my imagination. At any rate, if you will give me an impersonal opinion, perhaps I may see things in a different light. I am in love with a man nearly twice my age. I am 27; he is 47. I was married when I was 20 and divorced two years later. My life hasn't been too happy. He was married and has two children, whom he adores. He, too, is separated but not divorced.

We met in Washington almost two years ago. We are both here working in interesting, similar jobs,—for the duration. It was practically love at first sight, although I've never particularly believed in such a thing. Our tastes, interests and even our religious beliefs are the same; and we have many friends of various ages in common. In the past two years, we have gone a great many places together. At first, I was so happy in his company, so engrossed in his interesting conversation, so delighted to have some one "making a fuss" over me once again, after a rather dreary time, that I never gave a thought to other people, or what they might say or think about us.

But one night I overheard a couple discussing his wife. The gist of the conversation was, "Do you remember how crazy he was about her for such a long time? I wonder how she feels about this? Do you suppose he'll divorce her? Do you suppose she'll let him?" And running throughout their conversation were little references to me, such as, "She'll soon tire of him. He's twice her age," etc. I suppose I always realized the age difference; but until that conversation, if I thought of it at all, it was only to wonder what I should do with my life if he should die and leave me. Life would be terribly empty without him.

I have never been happier with anyone. And don't you think a woman of my age, with my past experience, is older than her years in her attitude? I know when I am lunching with girls my own age, I feel centuries removed from them. And I am not a bookish type, either. I love dancing and parties and night life, as does this man. He is an excellent dancer and loves a good time. If we marry, do you think we will both regret it later? Do you think he will hesitate, for instance, to take me with him to his daughter's graduation from college,—when at that time, I will be only a few years older than she? Do you think, as time passes, that I will wish I had married someone younger?

A. F. F.

Listen to Still Small Voice Within

DEAR A. F. F.: In the August, 1943, issue of the magazine TOMORROW,—a copy of which reached this desk in yesterday's mail,—is an article by J. Donald Adams, entitled, "The Right to Be Conservative." The article gets under way with these words, "In the gray granite city of Aberdeen there is carved in stone over a door of Marischal College this motto from the founder of that ancient seat of learning:

THEY SAYE
LET THEM SAYE!

"It is a good maxim . . . for life,' Adams comments ". . . For much too long a time we have been beset by fear of what 'they' will say. The state slaves of the totalitarian countries live in abject fear of what 'they' will say; but 'they' in their case has the definite connotation of the party bosses who rule their lives and thoughts. In our case, 'they' is a shadowy bogeyman, or at the worst, Mr. and Mrs. Brown, who look down their noses at us from next door.'

FROM THIS beginning, Mr. Adams develops a thought-provoking appeal to men and women to act in obedience to inner authority,—i. e., in accord with their certain and true personal beliefs,—if they would justify and most responsibly employ their citizenship birthright in our democratic society, and in so doing, get the most of what is best out of life for themselves, while improving the community life as a whole. Although Mr. Adams' thesis is chiefly concerned with the lack of individual character manifest in the thoughtless and gullible acceptance, by majority masses of people, of current-reigning political philosophies in their respective countries, nevertheless it contains a message for you; and a moral that may be applied with profit to your management of your strictly private life.

Face Truth and Make Decision Accordingly

THERE ARE many proverbs that might define the moral. Perhaps the best is: Know Thyself. And then let your own conscience and prescience supply the certitude upon which to base your actions. So much for "what they say." Now, as to what I think,—I think the crux of your justifiable uncertainty concerning what the future holds for you, in relation to the man, has to do with these questions: Does the man want and intend to marry you? Has he said so? Could he obtain a divorce, if he wanted one? Is he a man of good character and responsible temperament, in relation to women, and in the domestic arena of life? Or is he that most tinsel and tawdry of mature-age men, a perennial playboy at heart, intrinsically unstable in his affections,—now trying, in "partying" combine with you, who are half his age, to recapture the ghost of his youth?

UNLESS THE true answers to these questions establish him as a man of fine character, and unless the play-bond that exists is sustained by a meeting of minds on a mature level of thought,—the level of his age, rather than yours,—it is probable there is nothing of enduring great value in the relationship for either of you. And, on the other hand, if such values are there, the fact of the age-difference may be dismissed as irrelevant, now and forever.

Breakfast High in Proteins Secret of Morning Efficiency

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

The scientific application of dietetics involves not only what is in the meal, but how much of each ingredient and when the meal is taken. During war times nutrition experts have been experimenting to find out which meal pattern will give the worker the most energy.

Leaving out the minerals and vitamins which do not concern us in this discussion—the three elementary substances in a diet are the carbohydrates, the fats and the protein.

The carbohydrates are sugars and starches and you get them mostly from vegetables, bread, sugar and fruits. The fats are in many vegetables, but the principal source is what is attached to meat, and also butter and cream. Protein is in some vegetables—peas and beans have a good deal—but vegetable protein is not easily digested or absorbed and our best source of protein is meat and milk.

Role of Various Foods

What these substances do when they get in the body is to furnish energy and replace tissue. They all do both of these to a certain extent. Any overweight person can tell you that fat is converted into tissue, and when he starves himself to reduce he burns his own fat to produce energy. But fat is a slow burner, and is not a good energizer. The question arises as to whether protein or carbohydrate is the fastest and best energizer.

Now it is important that workers in industrial plants should get energy quickly at the right time. To that end experiments have been done giving a person only one of the three ingredients at a meal and seeing how his efficiency works out.

Mid-Morning 'Pickups'

In general it has been found that if the worker gets a high protein meal at breakfast he does better than under any other system. This means eggs, milk and meat rather than buckwheat cakes and syrup.

A worker eating a high protein breakfast can go from 9 a. m. to 2 p. m. with hardly any feeling of fatigue. If he does the buckwheat cakes and syrup stunt he gets tired about 10 a. m.

If he wants to spare his protein reserve energy, the worker can give himself a jolt with a little quick acting and quickly absorbed carbohydrate. Many industrial plants supply mid-morning and mid-afternoon lunches. It is the secret of the efficiency of the mid-morning visit to the soda fountain.

In other words, start yourself out with protein and keep it supplemented by carbohydrate during the day.

The reason the high protein meal keeps the energy up so long is fairly easy to understand. Fat, as we said, is burned slowly so a preponderantly fat meal is a sluggard. Carbohydrate, on the contrary, goes too fast. But the protein stays in there pitching until mid-afternoon.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

THANKSGIVING'S HERE AGAIN—And brings more to be thankful for than last year, praise be! With ration book mathematics what they are, it's sure that many families will have their Thanksgiving dinners in restaurants and hotels which seems to be amazingly well fixed with holiday turkey . . . Consider, too, how you can combine entertainment with dinner at many spots . . . Linger long enough over the cordials at Olmsted's and the place turns into a night club with the inimitable Nan Blakstone presiding . . . At the Troika, Paul Young's and the Balalaika you'll find gay and sophisticated floor shows both early and late in the evening—also you can start your holiday dinner with excellent borscht in case you're in a Russian mood . . . The Lotus is staging an early afternoon floor revue for those who like their Thanksgiving dinner at this time, as well as the usual evening shows . . . It would be fun to have a fairly early dinner at Treasure Island, getting there in time to enjoy (and perhaps participate in) Rocco Terrone's 4:30 broadcast . . . At Madrillon you can dance to either Ramon's rumbas or the Broadway tunes of Carr van Sickler. Chef Chinto can whip up marvelous Latin-American dishes if you feel like having a Mexican Thanksgiving . . . There's lots of entertainment as well as good food at the Restaurant "400" both at the early cocktail hour and later in the evening . . . If you'd like some fancy Neapolitan touches to your Thanksgiving dinner, try the Copocabana where you'll also find Willie Leon's nifty rumba crew, or Ciro's with fine singers and the Mayor's French horn tricks . . . Good music will supplement Thanksgiving goodies at those huge and handsome eateries, Mayfair and the Neptune Room . . . At El Patio the steaks are so grand that I'd be inclined to give them the nod instead of turkey. There also you'll find peppery little Patsy Garrett and Myles Hallett's music . . . These are only a few Thanksgiving good time ideas. You'll be bale to roll many others of your own.

BERNICE PARKS, gorgeous creature who'll star at tonight's opening of the Club Jalna

Justin Stone and his orchestra will remain at the Roosevelt Hotel for seven more weeks. This is good news for Washington but too bad for Chicago's Hotel Sherman which has been trying to lasso him.

THE EGYPTIANS DID IT, TOO. Looking like Cleopatria, Astra Andre glides out on the Lotus floor in a gold headdress of Dache genre, heavy jewelry and a sketchy skirt effect of black chiffon. After sundry gracile steps amid whorls of incense smoke, Astra suddenly tosses away the hampering chiffon and there she is—dressed in three pieces of costume jewelry! Yessir! It's an Egyptian strip! And if Astra ever danced it on Marc Antony's tomb, he'd get right up.

OF SONG BIRDS. Between curls, pigtails, pompadours and long bobs, Marian Carl, bright-eyed soprano of the Old New Orleans, is the most versatile girl in town. . . . You'll love the way Nora Williams boogies up "Tchornya" (Black Eyes") at the Windsor Room while Matt Windsor regards her with big, reproachful, Russian eyes. . . . How their fans are going to miss Georgia and Jerry at the Anchor Room! They close on Saturday. . . . Carole Page of the Mayflower Lounge has an amusing little Hattie Carnegie gown with the Carnegie name printed all over it. . . . The Dubonnet Room's Tony Lanasa has a prize memory—of singing at the Willard on the night of the first Roosevelt Inaugural. . . . Del Rio's Kay Allen is a rhapsody in blue in an Alice-blue gown with pale blue feathers at her shoulders and in her hair. . . . "Buddy Harmon of Cafe Caprice has the most jovial smile we can recall. He's tops with men customers. . . . Singer Elaine Moore of the King Cole Room is also a model. Her picture in "Ringside Table" brought her this glamorous sideline.

Peter Carter Says

Nan Blakstone, who is now panicking customers at Olmsted's, has had much written about her. She should have. Nan is a great actress with talented fingers for a piano. Her emotions are quicksilver—one time excessively gay—minutes later poignant, dramatic with great warmth and depth. There is an intensity of feeling there that carries an audience along with her. And—how she plays with her public—a bit of a rib—a delicate slap (when needed), a deep chuckle and a low "darling" to a favored few. One feels that Nan belongs to them, but also that they belong to Nan. She is vital, with a dominant power that has an insidious hypnotism and she is so utterly herself that it is like a breeze in a sultry room.

New and Old Films for the Holiday

Midcity Programs Hit High Level; 'Guadalcanal' Good All the Way; News Notes and Gossip of Theater

TO MAKE POSSIBLE the rigging up of the Thanksgiving calendar of picture-viewing 24 hours in advance—barring flood, fire, managerial changes of mind and other acts of God—the line-up of attractions in the downtown theaters will be as follows: First-runs—John Garfield and Maureen O'Hara in "The Fallen Sparrow," at Loew's Capitol; Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, John Loder and Gig Young in "Old Acquaintance," at the Earle; Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland and Tommy Dorsey's Orchestra in "Girl Crazy," at Loew's Palace; Leslie Howard, posthumously, in "Spitfire," Metropolitan . . . Holdovers—Walter Huston, Ann Harding, Walter Brennan, Anne Baxter, Erich Von Stroheim and notable cast in "The North Star," at RKO-Keith's; Barbara Mullen and Michael Redgrave in "Jeannie," at the Little; Betty Grable and Robert Young in "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," third week at Loew's Columbia . . . At the Earle, Marie Nash will headline the stage revue . . . The Three Mandels in "A Dress Rehearsal," at the Capitol, surrounded by Allen and Kent, dancers; Ming, Ling and Hoo Shee in what is described as a "Chinese Jamboree," and Dodson's Simian Braintrust—which might turn out to be as good as any other kind . . . And that reminds me—not that last act, but the foregoing more or less en toto . . . Those who feel that they'd rather not have their minds read better watch the bookings at Loew's Capitol, so they'll know when to stay away . . . Dunninger, the mentalist with uncanny powers, is coming up in an early stage bill . . . And speaking of Betty Grable—as we were hastily, somewhere back there—she and Carmen Miranda have been added to the cast of "Four Jills in a Jeep," at Twentieth Century-Fox . . . That makes it quite a cast, with Carole Landis, Kay Francis, Martha Raye and Mitzi Mayfair, together with Dick Haymes (his first picture). Jimmy Dorsey and Phil Silvers, already in there . . . Based, of course, on the Landis-Francis-Raye-May-fair recent tour of the overseas fighting fronts.

MAUREEN O'HARA

Now It Can Be Told

At yesterday morning's preview of "The Fallen Sparrow," the drama desks were brought up to date by being shown the last reel or so of "Guadalcanal Diary," which they had missed at the Philadelphia premiere because that confounded 11:46 back to Washington was on time! . . . Fine as it was up to the point where we had to leave the conquest of the island up in the air, along with our tempers, "Guadalcanal" is still finer, now that we have seen it all . . . Reaches a victorious climax that will blow you right out of your pew, without any sacrifice of the rough-and-ready humor that agreeably punctuates all the rest of the film . . . And as for the "Sparrow," if you ever got into a picture at the beginning in your life, do it on this one . . . Those who walk in after it has started will have a dizzy time of it trying to catch the hang of this bafflingly involved espionage-mystery yarn, adapted from the novel by Dorothy B. Hughes . . . It's tough enough to follow, even if you pick it up at the first flash . . . The last reel, of course, clarifies the whole thing—but not if you haven't seen it all . . . Today's screening of "Girl Crazy," with Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, et al., should offer no such problem—although I must confess many of Tommy Dorsey's orchestral arrangements leave me wondering what they're all about . . . Hearts and Flowers" and "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," that's me! . . . That sturdy, old Washington actress, Peggy Ann Garner, who must be all of 10 or 12 by now, will play opposite Roddy McDowall in "The Son of Flicka," Twentieth Century's sequel to the Technicolor hoss opera that scored such a hit as an outstanding "sleeper."

Where's the Circus?

The added brightness of the sunshine in the pre-Thanksgiving interval no doubt is due to the presence in town of that effulgent stentor, Mr. Frank Braden . . . Long a harbinger of the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus, Frank now is smiling his way up and down the country in the interest of the better items emanating from the Twentieth Century-Fox lot—"The Song of Bernadette," "Bandwagon," "Woodrow Wilson," "One World" and this and that . . . Another of the visiting firemen—they start 'em, instead of putting 'em out—is Al Selig, who will tell you, if sufficiently coerced, that Universal's release of the Charles Boyer-Julien Duvivier production of "Flesh and Fantasy" is by all odds the greatest picture ever made . . . Could be, if it lives up to its cast.

Just-Another-Thursday Note

Howda ya mean, holiday? Didn't you read the first of this?

ROSALIND RUSSELL,

an actress of many moods and emotions, who once again will be seen as a flip, frothy belle in Columbia's "What a Woman," her next screen vehicle. Willard Parker and Brian Aherne will be among the men she rules by head and heart—a very fine trick, if you can do it!

Dying Wish

When the great Max Reinhardt died recently, his family inserted this announcement in the New York Times, conforming to his wishes:

"Friends are expressly requested not to send flowers, and in lieu, if they so desire, contribute to any cause that will help to defeat Hitler."

HEDDA HOPPER

Author Kept on Anxious Seat!

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 23.—H. Allen Smith, author of "Low Man on a Totem Pole" and "Life in a Putty Factory," has been batting his brains out in office cell at Paramount. So far he's turned out three original story ideas, but his boss, Buddy de Sylva, hasn't told him whether they're good or lousy. In the meantime, he's got a reprieve and is doing additional dialogue for Bob Hope and Bing Crosby in "Road to Utopia." . . . Don Hartman, writing "Treasure Chest"—a pirate period story with ships and things—for Bob Hope, says it could be the end of an era. Now that Madeleine Carroll is ready to return and do another picture, might I suggest, since she's done so much for the merchant marine, she come back and transfer her affections to pirates? Pirate Hope sure has a hankering for that blonde. Then, too, "My Favorite Blonde" cleaned up. . . . Bonita Granville checked into RKO for "Are These Our Children?" and feels she's arrived. She's got Ginger Rogers' dressing room, and Charlie Koerner had welcomed her with flowers. . . . Ginger Rogers will be on hand for opening of "Lady in the Dark" in New York the middle of January.

BONITA GRANVILLE

Entertainment Plus

The Humphrey Bogarts are off to New York. They will be joined by Zero Mostel and then a 10-week tour of overseas Army bases. We love 'em—call them "the battling Bogarts." If they'll only put on a family row for the boys over there, it will be a knockout. . . . Item here that Patsy Mace was going to New York to wed Jack Warner, jr. was slightly premature. Patsy's going to New York all right, but to do modeling and perchance a play—with no thought, so far, of matrimony.

Showmanship

Since Mary Martin is the sensation of New York, it's kind of smart of Metro to send Lucille Ball, Kathryn Grayson, and a bunch of beauties on a personal appearance tour. Nothing gives you so much assurance as a real live audience that can laugh, cry, applaud, or howl, as the impulse hits 'em . . . Nils Asther leaves for New York Theater Guild's "Jacobowsky and the Colonel"—Franz Werfel's story which Clifford Odets put into play form. That's become a closed corporation . . . Since returning from Maurice Evans and Shakespeare for our men in Honolulu, Judith Anderson will play the mother in "National Velvet," which stars Mickey Rooney and Elizabeth Taylor . . . Jane Darwell trained out for the big town to do "Suds in Your Eye."

Magic Lingers On

Orson Welles ordered a little memento made up for Marlene Dietrich. It's a crystal ball, held up by gold hands, set in a base of black magic. Aggie Moorehead gets gold winged victory earrings. Rita Hayworth ordered for Orson a replica of his circus wagon—Orson Welles' Wonder Show—in gold cuff links. They're museum pieces, with exact words on the links that he had on the wagon. Everything works, including wheels. Everything, that is, except the window with Orson's head stuck out, saying, "Obediently yours." Nothing was ordered for Rita.

Slap-Scrappy!

What goes on? Maria Montez claims a make-up man slapped her so hard while putting on her make-up that it brought tears to her eyes and almost gave her hysterics. In my picture days make-up men were the gentlest, most patient, godlike creatures in any studio. . . . Eddie Horton moved a wing of his place away from the main structure, added a dining room and kitchen, and has turned it over to doctors working at the new Birmingham hospital for servicemen in the valley.

Mat Says Welcome

Bob Weitman of New York's Paramount Theater leaves for our town the end of the month to line up bands and personalities for his theater. It's usually other way 'round. He gets 'em first. Didn't he start Sinatra off on the road to—O let's be big and call it glory! . . . Paramount signed Stan Thompson from Metro's drafting department. He'll turn actor with Betty Hutton in "Incendiary Blonde." . . . Anna Lee brought me one of Mussolini's Fascist hats from her four months overseas entertaining job. Gossip From Gotham

New York, Nov. 23.

When the five Senators, who toured the war fronts of the world, were entertained at Buckingham Palace, Queen Elizabeth asked Senator Chandler of Kentucky what he thought of Scotland, where their plane had landed. "Ah swear," replied Chandler, "it was so beautiful, with that beautiful blue grass, Ah tho't Ah woke up in Kaintucky" . . . Chandler, who was in the Stork Club the other night, has a rubber stamp with his name printed in Chinese letters. Mme. Chiang Kai-shek gave it to him and gave others to his four colleagues . . . Chandler has a Short Snorter bill signed by King George—who was made a Short Snorter by President Roosevelt. Roosevelt mailed the King a Short Snorter bill, with four signatures on it.

Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, now is mulling over three offers of jobs in private industry. The most attractive is a $100,000 a year job as head of a utility . . . The WPB, incidentally, is losing the services of Frank Folsom, who was vice president of Montgomery Ward. Folsom will become vice president of the Radio Corporation of America . . . The American Theater Wing has received a 1 million dollar check from producer Sol Lesser, as the first royalty installment from the movie, "Stage Door Canteen" . . . Lord Beaverbrook has been covering the British plays and making recommendations for his friend, Billy Rose. When Beaverbrook was named to the Cabinet, Rose cabled a congratulatory cable, adding "You'll do a fine job—but don't do it on my time."

Anton Dolin, the ballet star, says he's the unluckiest realtor in show business. Dolin invested his savings in a home in France, two days before the war began. The purchase, incidentally, was made against the advice of Serge Lifar, who had just returned from Italy, where he knew the Fascist leaders. Lifar still is in France, doing his ballet work The film offer for "One Touch of Venus" is up to $400,000 . . . "Hull, Eden and Molotov were only the salesmen arranging the big deal," he replied. "Now the Big Bosses must come along to clinch it."

One of the most unusual jobs in Hollywood is that held by a lady who receives $10,000 a year for story-telling. He earned his living in the range between the odds . . . Boston would place bets on anything—sporting events, elections, trial acquittals, the length of military campaigns, anything. One day last week a friend called, and said he wanted to place a bet. "But I want to know the odds, Sam," he stated. "What odds on your going to jail?" . . . "My life," said Sam, "is one thing I won't bet on."

Laughton Niceness Well Concealed

Hollywood—American Rangers crowded the big castle in "The Canterville Ghost." Director Jules Dassin rehearsed a scene in which Robert Young, William Gargan and Ragg Ragland are introduced to little Margaret O'Brien.

Off in a secluded corner of the sound stage Charles Laughton was being made up and tested for the eight hair-raising appearances he makes, in different horrific disguises.

When the scene was finished Laughton went to the main set, to allow the cameraman to photograph his make-up for a test. As he reached the set door, Margaret emerged.

She stopped dead in her tracks with a terrified glance.

Laughton's mild voice came from behind the disguise.

"It's only me, sweetheart," he reassured her. "Just trying to be a silly old ghost frightening people—but not you."

"You're awfully nice," she told Laughton, "but I don't think anybody would know it to look at you now!"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

BEHIND THE ARMY'S breath-taking cut of 13 billions from its appropriation bill were some sledge-hammer tactics by the Budget Bureau. And behind that in turn was a scathing off-the-record session of the Ways and Means Committee, at which Detroit's determined Representative John Dingell put the screws on Budget Director Harold Smith.

Dingell, though a Democrat and a thorough Roosevelt supporter, subjected Smith to one of the most piercing probes of the current congressional session.

"How much money is the Army spending each month?" he asked Smith.

"About 7 billions per month," replied the Budget Director.

Congressman Dingell made a rapid mental calculation.

"The Army," he said, "now has 206 billions already appropriated and awaiting expenditure. That means about 29 to 30 billions a month. In other words, you're asking us to appropriate at the rate of 30 billions a month though the Army is spending only 7 billions a month.

"Now will you tell me," continued Dingell, "just how much money the Army must have appropriated ahead of time and lying idle for its loose system of expenditure?"

"I don't know that I'd call it loose," replied Smith.

"Well, what do you call the fact that we appropriate 32 million dollars for the Pentagon Building and the Army spends 78 million dollars? What do you call the fact that around the Pentagon the Army builds 40 miles of road, 27 bridges, removes one lake, digs out another lake in another place, and has altered the entire northeast corner of Virginia ave. around the Pentagon Building?

"What was this for?" stormed Dingell. "To hang a couple of extra stars on Lieut. Gen. B. B. Somervell in reward for doing what he damn pleases—without permission from Congress."

Army's Sauerkraut Monopoly

"ALSO," CONTINUED THE irate Congressman from Detroit, "what about the million and a half dollars' worth of first-class machine tools that the Army sold in the Detroit area for the ridiculous price of only $40,000? I understand they're now being sold back to the Government.

"An expenditure like that has nothing to do with winning the war. We can win the war without throwing the taxpayers' money down the yawning mouth of the War Department.

"Don't you have some control over the Army? You're supposed to be the Budget Director. Do you put your O. K. on everything the Army wants?"

"No," replied Smith, "but I have no authority to stop them."

"Well, why in hell did the Army buy up the whole sauerkraut crop of the United States?" continued Dingell. "We aren't running a German army. And even if we were, that's more sauerkraut than all the armies of the world could eat if you fed it to them three times a day.

"And why," he asked, "did the Army buy the entire salmon pack at sky-high prices and then disgorge four fifths of it on the market toward the end of the season? Is that what you call military planning?

"Or why did the Army break the OPA ceiling prices on turkeys? We all want the boys to have turkeys, but that's not the question. The Army can commandeer turkeys if it wants to, but instead they pay 8½ cents above the ceiling price.

"It looks to me," concluded Dingell, "that this is a result of the Army having too much money. I for one am not in favor of skinning the taxpayer just to pdease the brass hats who don't know how to plan."

That ended the lecture. Budget Director Smith has now cut 13 billions from the Army appropriations bill. But Representative Dingell points out that the Army is spending only 7 billions a month while getting 29 billions from the taxpayer. He is determined to see even more pruning.

Note—WPB's Charles E. Wilson is now battling with both the Army and Navy over cost-plus contracts. He says billions could be saved by eliminating them.

Capitol Chaff

THERE HAS BEEN QUITE a buzz-buzz about Harry Hopkins and his close friendship with John Hertz, Yellow Cab king of Chicago. Harry's eldest boy had a job with Hertz before he joined the Army. Some say it's chiefly a race-track friendship hatched at Arlington Park, which race course Hertz partly owns . . . When Charley Wilson WPB boss, resigned, he was deluged with phone calls and telegrams urging him to stay on, many from men with whom he had differed. He has yielded to White House pressure and will stay for the time being . . . The job being talked about for WPB's hard-working boss Donald Nelson is the same as that held by Mrs. Roosevelt's uncle, the late Forbes Morgan, czar of the liquor industry. Jim Farley, several years ago, declined such an offer, took up soft drinks instead.

Heavy Snow Ends Over N. Y. Area

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 23 (AP).—A record November snowfall lasting more than 36 hours petered out tonight after partially paralyzing communications and transportation facilities in northern and eastern New York and contributing to three deaths.

Albany's snowfall of 12.3 inches broke a 43-year-old record for the month. Glens Falls reported 9 inches. Other Warren County communities had up to 20 inches.

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, November 17, 1943. Notice is hereby given that in accordance with the provisions of an item authorizing changes in the permanent system of highways contained in D. C. Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914 (Public Act No. 435, 62nd Congress), approved March 4, 1913, as amended by an Act approved April 30, 1926 (Public Act No. 68, 68th Congress), the Commissioners of the District of Columbia will give a public hearing in the Board Room in the District Building, 14th and E Streets, Northwest, Washington, D. C., on MONDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1943, at 10 o'clock A. M., to interested property owners in the matter of a proposed change in the plan of the permanent system of highways affecting property in the Southeast Section of the District of Columbia located within the area bounded on the north by Alabama Avenue and Jasper Street, on the southeast by the District of Columbia-Maryland Boundary Line, and on the west by Camp Simms, revising the proposed street system by eliminating proposed streets and providing new proposed streets within the above described territory. A plat showing the proposed changes, numbered as Surveyor's Office Map 2929, is on file in the office of the Surveyor, D. C. Room 405 District Building, 14th and E Streets, N.W., Washington, D. C., and may be examined by interested parties during business hours prior to the hearing. Said map will also be displayed at the hearing and the Commissioners will consider any suggestions or protests concerning the proposed changes as shown on above-mentioned map. JOHN RUSSELL YOUNG, C. DONALD DUCK — By Walt Disney

WE BEEN WONDERING WHAT FIRE IS.
UNCA DONALD, DO YOU KNOW ANYTHING ABOUT IT?
ANYTHING! I KNOW EVERYTHING ABOUT IT!
FIRE IS A CHEMICAL PROCESS ACCOMPANIED BY THE EVOLUTION OF LIGHT AND HEAT, COMMONLY THE UNION—OF SUBSTANCES WITH OXYGEN!

Copr., 1943, Walt Disney Productions—World Rights Reserved.

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

I MADE THESE COOKIES WITH MRS. DE LYLLA'S RECIPE AND I WANT YOU TO TAKE HER THIS SAMPLE!
HM—! TELL YOUR MOTHER I'LL PHONE HER!
WELL, I WROTE IT DOWN JUST THE WAY YOU SAID!
I'D BETTER COME OVER AND SHOW YOU! I STILL THINK YOU USED TOO MUCH WATER!

JOE PALOOKA — Wan Meeneet Pliss — By Ham Fisher

YOU WANTA KNOW WHY I WAS SO SORE? KNOBBY WAS IN LOVE WITH JOY ALLURE.
WHO WOULDN'T BE? SHE'S SENSAY!!
I WOULDN'T. SHE WAS A LITTLE FLIRT. SHE MADE A PLAY FER ME.
HEY—SOMETHIN'S GONE WRONG!
HEM HEM.
JUS WAN MEENEET PLISS. FILUM BRAKE
GO ON WIT' TH' STORY.
THIS ACTOR WAS NUTS ABOUT 'ER. SHE WAS PLAYIN' HIM AN' KNOBBY. THEN HE MAKES TROUBLE BY TELLIN' KNOBBY I'M MAKIN' A PLAY FER HER!

JANE ARDEN — A Hard-Boiled, Old Skinflint — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

JANE'S BEEN TELLING ME WHAT A FINE MAN YOU ARE—OH SHE HAS HAS SHE?
COME IN, MR. STUN— I WANT YOU TO MEET MRS. OSMAN—
WELL, I'M NOT— I'M A HARD-BOILED OLD SKINFLINT, IF YOU WANT TO KNOW THE TRUTH—
THAT'S WHY YOU CAME HERE, I SUPPOSE?
WELL, I WAS CURIOUS— THAT'S ALL— YOU CAN'T STAY HERE FOREVER—
WHAT ARE YOUR PLANS?
I'M GOING TO TRY TO GET MRS. OSMAN STARTED IN A BUSINESS OF HER OWN— SOMETHING SHE CAN DO AT HOME!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

FASTER! I'VE GOT TO GET TO LOIS' APARTMENT IN A HURRY. I CAN PICTURE HER LYING THERE UNCONSCIOUS, HER LEG BROKEN— AND NOBODY WITH HER BUT HER LITTLE NIECE!
MOMENTS LATER, THE MAN OF TOMORROW LANDS WITHIN THE SHADOW OF A BUILDING ACROSS FROM THE APARTMENT...
BUT I'VE GOT TO CHANGE BACK TO CLARK KENT BEFORE I CAN LET SUSIE SEE ME!
WHILE AT THE WINDOW OF LOIS' LIVING ROOM, WATCHING FOR THE ARRIVAL OF "UNCLE" CLARK IS— SUSIE HERSELF!
VERY INTERESTING— VERY INTERESTING INDEED!
AND WHEN SUSIE OPENS THE DOOR TO THE AGITATED KENT—QUICK, SUSIE— WHERE IS SHE?!!
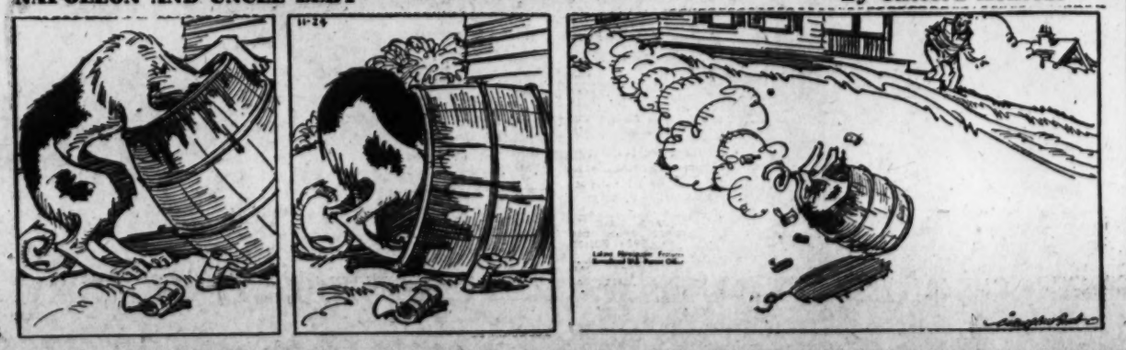
AUNTY LOIS? WHY, TWO MEN IN WHITE COATS AND LONG GREEN BEARDS CAME AN' TOOK HER AWAY IN A AMBULANCE WITH POLKA DOTS ON IT!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride



TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Mean Service — By Milton Caniff

LEAD US TO TH' SCUFFLIN', TERRY! THIS SQUADRON IS PININ' FOAH A WRASSLE WITH TH' NIPPUHS!
HEAR THAT, TOTE?
NOT THAT MY PHONY ACCENT WOULD FOOL ANYONE...
ROGER, TERRY... I SEE THEM COMING AT 15,000...
THE YANKEES REVEAL THEIR STRENGTH OVER THEIR WIRELESS... WE MUST NOT LINGER HERE...
...BUT THE ACCURSED TRANSPORT SKIMS THE SURFACE... OUR BULLETS FAIL TO DOWN HIM...
SEVERAL OF THE PASSENGERS HAVE BEEN HIT, MACK! HOW ARE OUR CHANCES?
SLIM, GRETT! —DON'T KNOW HOW LONG I CAN HOLD THE CRATE TOGETHER
THERE THEY ARE, GANG... PLOW IN!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

WOMEN CARRY SOME STRANGE THINGS IN THEIR HAND-BAGS... BUT I'M AFRAID MISS GYPSY MONEZ WOULD FIND IT HARD TO EXPLAIN THIS...!
SOLUTION NEAR IN CLUB THEFT
YOU'RE HANGING ONTO THIS, MAX, OLD BOY!... IT MIGHT COME IN HANDY... LATER!
PARDON ME, MISS MONEZ! ...WERE YOU, BY ANY CHANCE, LOOKING FOR THIS?

MICKEY FINN — Railbird — By Lank Leonard

WHY, OWNEY? WHY ARE YOU GETTING UP THIS EARLY?
I-AH- I'M ON A NEW SHIFT, DEAR! DON'T GET UP— I'LL HAVE BREAKFAST IN THE CAFETERIA AT THE FACTORY!
CAN YOU GET ME OUT THERE AND BACK BY EIGHT O'CLOCK?
SURE— WITH PLENTY OF TIME TO SPARE!
WHAT'S THAT ONE'S NAME?
SLEEPY SUE!

MR. AND MRS. — Vanity, Retail and Wholesale — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

WELL? ALL THROUGH?
YES. JUST A MINUTE
CAN'T DO WITHOUT THAT, CAN YOU?
AND YOU CAN'T DO WITHOUT THAT, CAN YOU?
THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN US IS THAT I CAN GET ALONG WITH A SMALL MIRROR, WHILE YOU REQUIRE ONE AS BIG AS ALL OUT DOORS
HUH!

DIXIE DUGAN — Tell Her! — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

I'M NOT SURE I'M IN LOVE WITH DIXIE!
BUT, ART! ARE YOU SURE YOU'RE NOT SURE?
YEAH— I'VE THOUGHT IT OVER CAREFULLY —IT'S ALL A MISTAKE!
YOU SHOULD TELL HER THEN
DIXIE'LL UNDERSTAND!
THAT I'M IN LOVE WITH YOU? I WANT TO MARRY YOU?
HUH??

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Deserted Rat — By Frank Martinek

WHERE ARE GREDA, RIMMEL AND SCIPO? I MUST FIND THEM!!
GREAT CAESAR! WHO DID THIS? GREDA? RIMMEL? WHERE ARE YOU?
WHAT HAS HAPPENED? WHY HAVE THEY DESERTED ME?

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

MR. ROPER AND CHIEF WAHOO?— PLEASE FOLLOW ME! LIEUT. MARTIN IS EXPECTING YOU!
NOW MAYBE WE'LL FIND OUT WHAT IT IS WE'VE HOPPED 7000 MILES TO DO, CHIEF!
C'EST, MONSIEUR ROPER ET LE CHEF WAHOO?
OUI, MONSIEUR LIEUTENANT! NOUS VENONS D'ARRIVER A' ALGER!
GOOD! YOU WERE SELECTED FOR THIS JOB BECAUSE OUR RECORDS SHOW YOU SPEAK FRENCH LIKE A NATIVE!
BUT— WAHOO DON'T SPEAKUM GABBLE TALK!
NO, BUT AS AN AMERICAN INDIAN, YOU ALSO FIT NEATLY INTO OUR PLAN! SIT DOWN AND I'LL EXPLAIN!

WINNIE WINKLE — Turn About Is Fair Play For Pa — By Branner

WHAT'S TH' IDEA OF YOUR GALLANT ATTENTION TO THAT WIDOW SUMMER?!!
SO Y'DON'T LIKE YER OWN MEDICINE! MAYBE YOU CAN EXPLAIN--
--HOW COME YOU GET DRIVEN HOME BY YER GALLANT BOY FRIEND EVERY MORNIN'-- AN' INVITIN' HIM IN FER COFFEE AN' EGGS - RIGHT' IN MY HOUSE??
OH, THAT!
IF YOU ENJOY TH' ADMIRATION OF TH' OPPOSITE SEX-- I, TOO, HAVE TH' CHARM AN' ATTRACTION TO ENCHANT AN' LURE TH' SIRENS!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED — By Zane Grey

GEE! THAT MUST BE A REAL SKELETON... NOT JUST A GUY WEARING A HALLOWEEN SUIT... WE COULD SEE IT'S BONES FROM ANY ANGLE!
AT LEAST OUR SKELETON HIGHWAYMAN ISN'T A "GHOST." I CAN HEAR HIM CRASHING THROUGH THE BRUSH!
THIS SHOULD BE EASY! HE SEEMS TO BE HEADING FOR THAT LIGHT AHEAD!

"I Am Thinking of My Darling", might mean a best-seller book to a lot of people but to me . . . it means my "Best-and-Only." What if he does miss up on a birthday now and then . . . or tramps into the living room wearing muddy shoes . . . or pops in for dinner with a college chum without phoning first. But men are like that. And he's no exception. He's really a grand guy. Like the time he fixed breakfast when I had a terrible headache. I have to laugh now, when he fried the eggs without using butter or fat . . . and then turned right around and fried the bacon with gobs of extra fat in the pan. Yes, I'm thinking of my darling this Christmas . . . and remembering him with gifts he can use and use and use. This is no time to waste money on frivolous things. It's the right time to be practical . . . and practical I will be, by shopping for his gifts and all the others at The Hecht Co. Man's Store."
